There are about 7,000,000 head of cattle in Madagascar, though the number is thought to be considerably higher, but this does not appear so as the natives think that by registering their cattle for taxes it gives them a sort of title to the number registered for in the case of loss or theft they are obliged to go to the native officials for passports and give full descriptions of the missing animals. In some of the more unsettled regions this may not be the case, but generally speaking it is so Therefore it may be taken for granted that they register all or nearly all, they possess In any case, 500 000 would probably more than cover the unregistered ones

The Zebu bullocks take about seven years to mature, and when fattened on open pasturage will weigh from 375 to 425 kilos, but when pit fatted will go as high as 500 kilos or more The cows are small, weigh ing only 300 kilos for the best pasture fattened

The percentage of big bullocks is very much less to-day than it was a few years ago owing mostly to the fact that the local meat works buy any class of animal for canning so long as they can get it at a low price. for with hides at high prices the meat costs very little Prices at present range from 125 to 250 francs for the smaller and poorer class of animals, to 450 francs for good pasture fattened bullocks and up to

700 francs for pit fattened

There are a few thousand cross breds near the principal centres such as Tananarive Tamatave, Antsirabe, etc., but this cross breeding has beencarried out more to improve the milk supply than to improve the quality of the beef. The bulls that are being used were imported from France and are mostly mulk, and the latter for beef: but it must be admitted that they are far from being the best of their class It would certainly be interesting to see the result of crosses from some of the more famous and quickly maturing beef breeds. Any improvement made so far in the way of cross breeding or the checking of disease is due altogether to the Veterinary Department which has a very capable staff, but they are greatly handicapped for want of funds and for this reason not able to accomplish very much

In the best cattle country "ticks" are very numerous, and until such time as this pest can be kept in check through dipping there is very little hope of successful cross breeding. There are two species of tick that cause most of the trouble—the ordinary Blue tick," and the "Bont " or "Bont legged tick. and the latter is very difficult to deal with. So far, practically nothing has been done to combat this pest.

There is not much cattle disease in Madagascar. and the native cattle seem immune causes the heaviest loss, and it may be estimated that 3%-4% of the cattle in the northern parts are infected with it, and a far greater percentage in the south There is also a mild form of Anthrax against which the Veterinary Department inoculate each year a large number of cattle The losses from Anthrax are, however, not high, and it may be considered that the disease is under control. The natives usually eat the meat of animals that die from Anthrax, so it cannot be very virulent

As regards the improvement of the native breed by selection the Veterinary Department has done little or nothing and such experiments that have been carried out in this direction are due solely to European breeders As nearly all the Malagasy breeders allow their young male animals to reach the age of three to four years before castrating them it happens, of course, that the cows are frequently mated with their own progeny, or with any nondescript animal in the herd The result is disastrous, but could be easily remedied if the owners were obliged to castrate their animals at or before the age of one year, and to use only bulls that had been certified by a representative of the Department The native veterinaries could easily perform those duties

The natural pasturage is in most parts very good. and the carrying capacity high but as the dry season lasts about seven months there is usually a shortage of grass for about two months before the rains which fall in the five months from the 1st of November to the end of March

This of course refers to the cattle country, for in the forest districts on the East Coast it rains nearly all the year round The cattle country generally is hilly, and in some parts mountainous. The hills are usually dry and rather barren, but the countless little valleys among them are really very good, usually enriched by small running streams or marsh land. In fact, the country is wonderfully well watered except in the south of the Island where a huge scope of land of the Normandy and Limousine breeds the former for has been infested with prickly pear. The Tourcoing Chamber of Commerce on the contrary is endeavouring to acclimatize South African merinos. Experiments so far in this direction have not been quite so successful as the results obtained at Ambovombe nevertheless the difficulties have in a certain measure been overcome and it is hoped that the fruits of efforts will be apparent in a not too far distant future

GOATS -- Apart from the Comoro Islands and the west coast of Madagascar among the Musulman populations of the Colony where goat breeding may be said to exist, goats are only found in insignificant numbers and are kept more for their meat than for milking

The native variety however descends from the Nubran goat and its milking qualities are not to be despised

They could easily be improved by the importation of the Alpine breed or even the Maltese variety if it were not feared that the latter might introduce Medi terranean fever a disease which is so far non existent in Madagascar

rucleus of genitors experiments will be continued on a more extensive scale in other parts of the Colony

The Administration is also contemplating the introduction of the Astrakan sheep which should thrive and be of service in certain dry regions in the south west of the island or in the west Sakalava country

The estimated total number of goats in Madagascar at the present time is scarcely more than 50 000 consequent increase in motor vehicles as being a mo e rapid means of transport.

The principal objects of horse-breeding in Vlada gascar are to provide remounts for the military corps and an element of sport on the local race-courses

The Veterinary Department has made an attempt at encouraging the breeding of light draught horses for agricultural and transport purposes by introducing Brittany stallions but the experiment has met with little success the demand for this class of animal being very small. It is true that in a country like Madazascar the draught horse which demands constant attention good keep special harness and an experienced driver cannot compete favourably with draught-oxen

The local Administration however is desirous of stimulating the horse breeding industry with a view to encouraging a more extensive use of horses for travel ling over the country roads and thus liberate for other work natives hitherto employed as filaniana (pala quin) bearers The scarcity of labour makes it impera tive that everything should be attempted to obvia e waste The gradual supression of the filanjana and its substitution by equine transport would be a means to attaining this end and would at the same time give a considerable impetus to the horse breeding industry At the present time there are only some 4,500 horses in the Colony 1 500 of which are brood mares The insignificance of these numbers is all the more deplorable as they render the breeding of mules on a large scale impossible and it is particularly the mule owing to its hardiness and sure footedness in difficult country which would be appreciated by travellers both as a riding and as a pack animal

Donkey breeding is carried on on an even smaller scale than horse breeding doubtless owing to the fact that until recently there has been little demand for them A certain number is now being used for trans port work

OSTRICHES -These birds introduced into Mada gascar from South Africa in 1902 are thoroughly acclimatised and thrive well at the Government farm at Befanamy and on private farms in the dry regions of the south. The slump in feather prices has how ever as is the case in South Africa arrested the develop ment of the industry Breeders confine themselves to keeping a few breed animals in the uncertain hope that ostrich feathers may once more be la mode

Cattle Breeding in Madagascar

By WM SUTHERLAND, Ambohi Janahary Madazescar

Cattle breed ng in Madagascar from the breeders point of view is a very promising industry but at present it seems to be passing through a critical stage

Most of the cattle are owned by the native Mala gasy nearly every family possess ng from one or two to several thousands and they take great pride in owning a few very bg bullocks which on the death of the owner are killed to make fete and to help his spirit on the way The horns are afterwards placed in conspicuous positions on the tomb of the deceased or on high poles in the village. When male children are circumcised bulls are killed and the father in con gratulating the child expresses the wish that his progeny may be as numerous and as vigorous as those of the bull

The cattle are nearly all of the Zebu breed, very hards and active, and travel long distances to market with less loss of weight than perhaps any other breed They are slow to mature, but when properly fattened the meat is of excellent quality. As draught oxen they also excel as they travel faster than most other breeds and pull well. The Malagasy use them also for puddling their rice fields by driving them in herds round and round the field which has been irrigated to a depth of about nine inches This is very trying work and they quickly lose condition Ploughing through mud and water up to their bellies, with half a dozen velling devils in loin cloths armed with sticks chasing them round, the wonder is that they survive at all

The hump is considered a great delicacy as it is formed of alternate layers of meat and fat It also acts as a reserve to strengthen the animal in periods when fodder is scarce, it then becomes limp and turns over to one side Where these cattle originated is difficult to say, but they greatly resemble the cattle of the East African Highlands though one sometimes sees one or two in a herd of pure faun grey colour with all the characteristics of the Indian Zebu usual colours are black and red or either of these two colours mixed with white The pure black seems to be the best colour, but red is also good and bulls of

either of these colours are very prepotent

There are about 7,000 000 head of cattle in Madagascar, though the number is thought to be considerably higher, but this does not appear so, as the natives think that by registering their cattle for taxes it gives them a sort of title to the number registered for in the case of loss or theft they are obliged to go to the native officials for passports and give full descriptions of the missing animals. ## Livestock Breeding in Madeira.

In this beautiful island famed for its salubrious, I equable climate and good wine, where the mean temperature is only in extreme instances above 74 deg. the rearing of live stock is much neglected as is proved by the very high market prices for pork mutton, beef, wool and dairy products There is an abundance of splendid pasturage, and the few breeders of live stock, as mentioned below, breed successfully existing live stock is, however, very insufficient to meet the island's demands and there is a good opportunity for importing agricultural stud animals, especially sheep and pigs The popular taste is in favour of the black breeds, especially the Berkshire pig and the large sized breeds would not meet with general approval This island group consists of the islands of Madeira and Porto Santo besides three smaller islands, which together form a Province of the Republic of Portugal The area is scarcely more than 320 square miles and the population about 165 000 The island of Madeira is 35 miles long and 12 miles broad, and across the island runs an extensive plain, Paul de Serra Here pasture and small farms abound and pig and sheep breeding should certainly prove very remunerative. In the lower part of the island, vineyards and orange and lemon tree plantations are mingled with small farms where fruit, coffee and arrowroot are grown Barley rye and wheat crops can be seen everywhere, but the chief source of income is in the part of the island where the world renowned Malmsey grapes from which the Madeira wine is derived are grown sheep 1410, pigs 2,078, horses 650. The Live Stock estimate states cattle 13 650.

The cattle found in the Island can be divided into two main classes corresponding to the two types humped, or Indian cattle, and humpless, or European cattle, the former being used for draught and meat purposes and the latter comprising the milk animals Most of the humped cattle originate from Madagascar stock and it is only of late that improvement has been started by crossing with the following imported Indian breeds Hissar, Ongole, Mysore, these importations having been carried out by the Department of Agricul ture soon after its inception in 1914

As regards the meat industry, no effort has so far been made to breed cattle specially for beef, animals of the Madagascar type being used indifferently for

draught or meat purposes

Quite recently, however, bulls and cows of the Charollase breed have been imported for the Stock Breeders Association The milk cattle comprise representatives of various imported breeds. The main portion of the local stock appears to descend from breeds of Northern France, such as the Bretonne and the Normandy cattle but have lost most of their characteristics Of late. Friesland cattle have been intro duced by the Department of Agriculture, and there is good ground to believe that this breed will successfully improve the dairy stock of the Island. The Jersey breed, too, has been imported, especially from Australia as well as some Shorthorn cattle but so far it cannot be said that the latter importations are showing marked signs of success

Breeding of pure bred pigs (specially Middle York and Berkshire breeds) is carried out on a somewhat limited scale, being confined specially to those establishments which are engaged in butter manufacture The mongrel pig is found in fair numbers throughout the Island more especially in labourers' compounds on Sugar Estates

Sheep are being raised here and there in the Colony, exclusively for mutton purposes Horse breeding was carried out on a small scale in the previous century but had to be abandoned on account of the abundance of "ticks" and, finelly, the prevalence of Surra' Of late however, a fresh trial with the breeding of horses of the speed type has been attempted on the littoral on the north eastern part of the Island but it is too early at present to state whether the trial will be a success or not Mauritius acquired by England through conquest and cession in the years 1810 14 has a total area of tants are descendants of the old French planters In 1885 a Constitution was given to the Island accord ing to which there are now eight official nine nominated and ten elected Members of whom a certain number is drawn from the local population. If there now and then are traces of dissatisfaction, such as a rule emanates from the educated Creoles The bulk of the population however is satisfied and general prosperity is the rule In 1835 when the elaves were emancipated most of the Mauritius planters turned to India for labour result of this is that to-day the Indians born and bred in Mauritius number well over one quarter of a mill or while the other inhabitants may be estimated at 100 000 Wealth and prosperity will come to this country through agriculture Blessed by nature in many directions conveniently situated in the north west corner of Africa soil and natural resources are such as to designate Morocco to become one of the big livestock raisers on the African continent. This fact was early recognised—indeed the Romans looked upon Morocco as their granary and for centuries vast fortunes were piled up by the Sultans and native chiefs through live stock breeding and grain cropping and if these circumstances only in comparatively speaking recent times have been known to the outside world the ex planation is that the rulers were always anxious to hide their country from the inquisitive eyes of the hated Europeans Almost 85% of the Morocco country is eminently suitable for farming The great Atlas and three-quarters are Creoles. As a point of fact the agricultural Hindus hold nearly half of the cultivated land of the Colony

As is well known Mauritius exists on its sugar production and even if during the last few years after the War there has been a slump in sugar prices. It may be asserted that on the whole the Island is prosperous

Scientific imi rovement of the larger agricultural estates in the Island was recommended and during the general prosperity brought to the Island during the war years through very high sugar prices many plantations were modernised and new machiners acquired in the sugar industry. Mauritius however complains of lack of closer contact with Europe and the fact remains that she is four weeks distant from England a circumstance that is regrettable as otherwise Mauritius would certainly become one of the hest holiday resorts for English travellers It is a del ghtful place full of beautiful scenery where life is easy and not too dear and in years to come undoubtedly the live stock industry will make headway and there will be plenty of room for improvements through imported Pedigree animals mountain chain separates the country from the desert to the south and east protecting the arable land from the hot desert winds. Moisture is obtained from the Atlantic and so it will be seen that the whole country is profiting from these physical advantages. When in years to come the great rivers and their tributaries are properly utilised the country can be irrigated to a very great extent for the benefit of agriculture The rivers Tensift Sebou and Oum er Rebia rise in the Atlas and flow in a westerly course towards the Atlantic so that construction of irrigation would be compara tively speaking easy and not too expensive With the help of these big rivers the large plains between them especially the plain of Marrakesh could be easily irrigated and here the more often than not rich crops could be many times increased in value. The question | quite possibly these figures represent a too low esti of irrigation however is not so easily solved as the native Tribes hold certain water rights which the French authorities are disinclined to alter or cut into Speaking generally the climate is beautiful and the heat seldom too oppressive although of course inland the influence of the moisture from the Atlantic and the cool breezes are less felt. In some places such as Fez and Marrakesh the summers are very warm. The rainfall as a rule is regular most of it falling in the Atlas regions while in the south in the Oases of Tafilet and in the valleys of Qued Draa where the rainfall is almost next to nothing moisture is created through the abundance of small rivers crossing the country in all directions. In certain years the rain is deficient when of course bad harvests occur In some districts such as the Casablanca Rabat and in the Meknes Fez the rain falls in the autumn and as a rule in sufficient quantities to allow the winter sowing. The spring rains are due in March April December and January

The soil is wonderfully fertile mostly a rich black soil although some light soils also can be seen. It is however a fact that in Morocco most crops thrive better in a not too heavy soil

Although it is difficult to exactly state the area of Morocco under the French Protectorate as no real survey has ever been made it is probably correct to state that round about six million acres are now cultivated chiefly for wheat maize millet linseed cummin seed beans and peas Sorghum is largely cultivated and market garden ng is carried on over some 15 000 acres New areas are every year being taken up and acres of land under cultivation in Eastern Morocco As regards Land Tenure, large areas are freehold property, while much land belongs collectively to various Tribes. The French Government have recently commenced a system according to which certain portions of these Tribal lands can be sold when it has been proved that the natives are incapable of proper cultivation. Then, the religious institutions own and hold very large stretches of land, the exact areas of which cannot be estimated as no survey has ever been permitted, and much land belongs to the "Makhzen" that is the Government These lands are obtainable for foreign settlers on long leases, and the Government never put any obstacles in the way of tenure. Of course, the whole question of tenure in Morocco is more or less in a state of flux owing to the absence of proper survey maps, and as a result from the disorganisation of Rights that has always existed in Morocco in spite of the fact that Islamic Laws concerning real estate are very clear, leaving nothing for guess work The French Government, however, have ever since the Protectorate was declared found it to be good policy to deal gently with the questions of land so as not to hurt the natives susceptibilities, but it is generally expected that during the next five to ten years a very clear Land Tenure System will be worked out The European settler, anxious to obtain land, can simply buy the same as most of the land is freehold. He has, however, to exercise great care in regard to the Land Titles and such should never be accepted for good on the face of the written word, nor should the would be purchaser entrust his instructions to a local land agent best way of acquiring real estate in Morocco is to acquire land from a European owner who has in his time, as a matter of course, gone through the whole machinery of ascertaining the rights Very large areas are divided up in Government estates, and more often than not let on easy terms to tenants During the last five years, or so, much land that formerly was used by the Tribes has now been obtained by the Government who are anxious to let the same to settlers willing to undertake proper cultivation On the other hand, grazing land is still held collectively by a Tribe or by a number of villages It is, however, the rule that a purchaser of arable land situated in the neighbourhood of such grazing land may utilise the grazing rights without any interference. In many parts of the country the right to graze cattle and other live stock over these natural pastures is easily obtainable from the Government against the payment of an annual small rent So far, fertilisers have not been utilised and, therefore, it is clear that the soil must indeed be fertile seeing that year after year since time immemorial good crops have been harvested. Most of the large estates now cultivated or purchasable, comprise from 1,000 to 1,400 acres There is a number of well cultivated estates of 2 000 acres but not easily obtainable, while here and there estates of 6 000 to 10 000 acres exist. often belonging to well to-do Moors The very best land under cultivation where irrigation exists or is l

easily arranged can be purchased from £12 to £18 an acre while less good land can be acquired at from £6 to £0 Unclean land requiring overhauling before cropping, is very cheap in price. These prices and conditions obtain in French Morocco, whereas in the Spanish and the Tangier Zones conditions are not so favourable, and more difficulties in connection with land tenure exist. The French Government are now working out a scheme for cutting up large stretches of fertile land into small holdings from 200 to 400 acres, with a view of creating garden farms, suitable for Europeans, but chiefly for French subjects, and these are obtainable on very easy terms of payment, or very long tenancies

In the western part of French Morocco it may be estimated that some 400 000 acres arable land are now farmed by Europeans Most of the farms here are from 200 to 1.000 acres in size In the neighbourhood of Meknes and in the Sebou valley the values are higher, prices varying from 400 to 700 Fres per hectare In the Doukkala district, and also in the Chaou district prices vary from 450 to 700 Frcs per hectan In the Zemmour district much good land is obtainable at 200 to 600 Frcs per hectare, and in the coast districts in the neighbourhood of Rabat the price 190 to 500 Fres per hectare Lands at now mentione prices are not irrigated, where an irrigation system well planned, is in full work the native owners ver often ask and obtain 900 to 2,000 Fres per hectare but these prices may not be unreasonable as the so is in a very high state of cultivation In the Beni Ahsen and the Gharb districts wher

there is a steady and invariably regular rain fall, muc and very fine grazing land exists These districts con stitute the north western part of the French Protectorate and lie in an unbroken stretch up to the mountain range The Rivers Oued and Sebou are running straigh across these lands and here the moisture is such as t keep the crops in a wonderfully healthy state, ever in very hot summers In this district conditions ar probably more favourable to the European settler than anywhere else There is a net of military railway stretching all over the land over which the farmers products, etc., can be carried at very low transpor rates, and the shipping facilities are quite good Her some wonderful crops are raised, wheat and barley fully comparable with the very best crops in Europe Splendid cattle and sheep are bred, generally speaking

In the Taza district lying between Fez and eastern Morocco, so far, arable farming has not been possible owing to the constant warfare with the Tribes but conditions are very promising chiefly for live stock raising, while very good crops can be seen. It is a beautiful country, full of magnificent olive groves richly watered through a net of rivers, with a thrifty population spread all over The new railway Taza-Fez will be a means of facilitating the marketing of farm

1*OROCCO 649

Among stock breeding districts the Rabat, through which the river Oued Bou Regret is winding its way to the coast is a large contributor to the cattle markets and very good cattle are bred here In Eastern Morocco live stock breeding is also well developed owing to heavy crops of Alfa and generally splended pastures This part of Morocco is much under the influence of sea winds with a plentitude of moisture while the land is elevated and the soil eminently suited to stock In this district there are more European breeders and farmers than in any other part of Morocco especially at Triffa close to the Bene Mountains on the Algerian frontier. This is a wide wheat growing district while barley and oats do splendidly commercial crops are grown here—the Geranium from which perfumes are distilled the Arachide utilised in the cattle cake industry wine olives etc Angad plain is a large stretch of arable land, and considerable cattle raising is taking place here Chaous is a district covering more than three million acres in parts of somewhat sandy soil and in other parts of a rich black earth while farther inland the soil is reddish in colour Several rivers are traversing the district and although cattle breeding is not so developed here it is merely a question of time when breeders will take up such activities owing to the vicinity of Casablanca one of the most important centres in the whole country Here very good land is obtainable at prices from £10 to £14 an acre

In the Province of Doukkala the soil is very rich and the crops grown heavy and of the very best quality Some 850 000 acres out of a total of 1 600 000 acres arable land are under cultivat on and here the popula tion is devoting its activities exclusively to farming and live stock breeding. The land is split up in very small farms all well cultivated and very rarely is any of these for sale Bes des cattle sheep and goats are bred here and horse breeding is of late coming to the fore owing to the introduction of French stallions Imports and exports are facilitated through the port of Mazagan Farther on a great agricultural district the Abda Chiadma Haha with Mogadore as a port is chiefly devoted to garden farming fruit growing and similar small pursuits but sheep are bred here in considerable quantities Honey production is also an industry to which much care is devoted and Mogadore honey is an article of export everywhere in demand

In the Marrakesh dustrict chiefly inhabited by native Tribes a very considerable live stock industry has existed since time immemorial and here very good cattle and sheep are bred but farming is neglected the people being more given to live stock breeding. When these enormous Plains are properly irrigated—the present system being most primitive almost valueless—probably the district will become prominent for horse breeding as the inhabitants are wide awake to the benefit of crossing their indigenous live stock with imported pure bred animals. Farther north one of the linest agricultural districts in Moroeco the Tadla district through which some important rivers add to the feet this is well cultivated indeed magnifi

As is the case in so many countries in Europe farming preparations commence in Morocco towards the end of October when ploughing is general all over the country. In June and July the crops are as a rule ready for harvesting and immediately the land is cleared the sowing of the second crop takes place Among the crops in eastern and western Morocco perhans Alfa should be given the prominence as it develops splendidly owing to the hot dry soil Canary seed is another crop of prominence and so is the Arachide while barley probably is the most commonly cultivated crop as it supplies the materials for bread making The sugar beet will someday take its place in crop rotation as experiments have proved the soil to be suit able but up to now the cost of transport seems prohibitive. The Cotton crop although experiments have proved successful is not so general as one would be inclined to think the reasons being a disinclination on the part of the cultivators to subject themselves to the hard work connected with the planting and the risks through night frost Experts hold however that it has been abundantly proved that Morocco is quite suitable for cotton cultivation

It is more likely than not that Morocco one day will become one of the largest stock raising countries on the African continent as the natives have a knack for breeding and great experience in handling live stock Since the French Protectorate became effective the live stock has increased enormously—in fact, accord ing to Government statistics cattle increased over 17% pigs 85° and sheep 27% while it is even stated that calves and heifers have increased by 60% The popu lation may at a low estimate be considered at six million people and as the live stock now bred is more than sufficient for maintaining the population the question of disposing of the surplus stock will soom become a pressing one. This is being realised by many and therefore with a view of turning the surplus stock into profitable business it is recognized that it can only take place through the importation and use of suitable Stud animals This remark may apply to cattle as well as pigs sheep and horses even goats and poultry Although the natives are very ignorant and their methods primitive in the extreme partly owing to ignorance of how to breed to profit and partly or mainly owing to poverty which prevents the acquisition of better animals valuable animals for breeding have never been acquired and the field for improvement therefore is very large indeed. There are of course considerable drawbacks to be overcome mainly the mortality that is the result of very dry seasons. This again can be partly perhaps totally overcome through the erection of sheds against the rays of the sun and better methods for storing fodder in advance while the question of watering never properly tackled is connected with the large percentage of the mortality The natives are however easily ' appreciation of the value of live stock and as already stated there is every

Morocco becoming a very large live stock raiser All that is required is initiative on the part of alread settled European farmers or the influence for good through European Breed Societies and breeders Enterprise in arrangements for imports of Pedigree live stock and perhaps more than anything else organisation for creating local Breed Societies to promote breeding of improved cattle sheep pigs and horses would powerfully help to develop an already much promising industry

The Morocco cattle almost uniform in appearance all over the country are very much of the same breed a. that to be found in all the Mediterranean countries on the African side. They obtain an average weight of 300 kilos while good specimens well fed often reach 500 kilos and above. The carcase percentage is 53° o to 55° and in this respect they are superior to the very same kind of cattle bred in Algeria me t as a rule is excellent. The oxen are strong patient and willing workers and they fatten quickly As milkers these cattle are not to be despised as a well cared for they easily yield up to fifteen pints o milk per day The milk fat is considerabl-3 8 to 4.20, and the e is no doubt about their value as foundation stock if cros ed by suitable bulls. Such attempt. at improvements have been made from time to time by Italian settlers who have imported the Indian Zebu and the results have invariably been reported as quite satisfactory The meat prices in Morocco have rise. continuously during the last twenty five years owin to greater appreciation of good butcher's meat and therefore breeding and feeding should prove very profitable all over Morocco if given sufficient attentio and care

Sheep breeding is a very ancient occupation al over Morocco where the stock is now well over nine mill on head. The mutton is excellent in taste and flavour and the carcase percentage surprisingly high The indigenous sheep is to be found in three different categories—the sheep of the great plains heavier than the other two the plateau sheep light footed more intellment and yielding very tasteful meat and the coast sheep chiefly to be found along the coasts of Morocco a flat bodied animal with coarse wool and unsatisfactory mutton propensities Its wool is low grade and only util sed by the natives The sheep in the plateau districts reach an average weight of 50 to 55 kilos and are in great demand by butchers all over the coun try while their wool is eagerly sought for by the woo merchants owing to its fine quality. The third catagory the sheep generally found all over the great plains is quite a good animal as a rule black faced yield ng a very fine wool of a peculiar lustre average production is 21 to 3 kilos although there is many a flock in the Tadla District where the annual yield is well over 5 kilos. These sheep have been developed in the Beni Ahsen in the Gharb as well as in the Cherarda, Beni and Meskine districts and their chief characteristic is a distinct likeness to the Merino sheep Whether they originated from Spain or the Spanish Merino and these Plain sheep were originally taken from the Sahara districts it is well nigh impossible to state but they have many char They are easily fattened acteristics in common and when ready for the butcher reach an average weight of 75 to 80 kilos. Once upon a time not so very long ago. they could be purchased at 6 to 8 Fres apiece while at the present time the prices are considerably higher The carcase percentage is about 50° o of the live weight This is a sheep that could be greatly developed through selection of rams in breeding to a certain degree and general care Travelling towards the Atlas mountains the observant traveller cannot help being struck by the great flocks of sheep of outstanding qualities found grazing everywhere, while noticing at the same time that there are enormous stretches of land left unused for I ck of grazing stock Morecco will most certainly become one of the chi-f suppliers of mutton as and when European breeders influence can be applied

Turning to pig breeding many an expert holds that Morocco is one of the most suitable countries for pig breeding as all kinds of crops suitable for feeding this animal are easily grown. It is an animal however that has always been neglected in Morocco probably for religious reasons but after the French Protectorate had been declared the pig stock developed and in creased by leaps and bounds and many a Moorish Tribe who prior to the arrival of the French felt repugnance to eating pork is now following the French example The repugnance felt in Tunis and in Algiers on the part of the population for having anything to do with the pig is not shared by the Moor in Morocco and probably the pig industry will from now onwards stead ly develop owing to the good prices paid in the local market for well killed pork. Most of the pigs bred in the country seem to have originated in Spain as they are distinctly of the Iberian types black with a well developed snout feeding chiefly on roots and pastures Realising that pig breeding and feeding may more rapidly bring well being to the various Tribes the French Administration some years ago inaugurated a system by which suitable plots of land from 500 to 1,400 hectares are let at a very low rent for a term of from three to five years the rent being assessed on the basis of the number of pigs kept on these plots The pigs are kept in herds grazing at will constantly on the move and so long as this system is practised the difficulties will always be a question of water and shelter If one takes into consideration that the cost of feeding is exceedingly low that pork is always in demand in any local market and that the meat of the native pig is very tasty while the animal slaughters well and with a satisfactory carcase percentage it will clearly be seen that development of the pig breeding industry in Morocco is merely a question of time There is certainly much to be done in this respect and as soon as pig breeders. Associations can be formed and pig breeding become a matter of planned action instead of the present happy-go-lucky system there is no reason why a big industry should not be developed

The Moroccan horse is a fine animal, strong splended as a transporter and with the care now given him through the influence of the French Authorities who have imported some good stallions from France and during the last ten years selected more than 800 stallions which are now kept all over the country at Dêpots the Morocco horse or pony-might easily become an article of export. In the mountain districts this little horse seldom exceeds 141 hands, while in the plains its height reaches 151

The Moroccan mule is one of the finest animals bred in the country, and very high prices are being paid such as from 5,000 to 8,000 Fres, while the average price is 5,500 Fres for an average animal It is an elegant animal, very easily fed, and much in vogue in the towns and cities where the Moors seem to prefer the mules to horses for light carriage work. It is stated that the Moorish brood mares are more suitable for breeding mules than horses The speed with which these mules move is astonishing, 20 kilometers an hour, for hours on end without getting tired being the rule agricultural work the mules are much in demand fetching anything from 900 to 2,000 Fres , while in many districts where the tribes cannot afford to nurchase them, donkeys are extensively used. As this animal is made suitable for every kind of work to which an owner may put it prices from 800 to 1,400 Fres are freely paid for an 'all round' good donkey

The goat in Morocco is a small sized animal, long haired, brownish, and not a bad milker Very large herds can be seen in the Mogador district, also in the Chiadma and the Tadla districts where goat-akins and goat-hair form valuable subjects for export. Most of these skins are sold to the glove factories at Grenoble in France while the better qualities are purchased by the Morocco leather tanners in Italy, France, Spain and many other countries

Such products resulting from live stock breeding as wool, hides and skins are in great demand in all the Morocco markets, and what is not consumed locally is exported to France As an agricultural worker the native is quite satisfactory, and when well fed, well treated and under a firm master, he can be expected to perform his duties to satisfaction. By nature he is inclined to laziness and slackness, but when so inclined, he works well without slacking, even with energy. His chief characteristic is pride and he is. therefore, very sensitive to praise or blame Employed in live stock breeding he is excellent, and as he is amenable to discipline, never quarrelsome, and by nature honest and good-tempered, it will be seen that there are no difficulties combined with taking up live stock breeding in Morocco in this respect. To sum up Morocco is a land of great possibilities for the farmer and live stock breeder, where conditions of life, speaking generally, are quite pleasant

Livestock Breeding in Mozambique.

The Live Stock estimate for Mozaml ique states cattle 340 000 sheep 6 000 pigs 12,500 In this Portuguese colons (Portuguese East Africa) with a population of about 3,250 000 and an area of 303 000 square miles divided into six districts—Cape del Gado Tete Lourenco Marqués

Inhambane Zambezia and Mozambique-the exact number of the existing live stock has not been ascer tained as no stock census has ever been taken but the native stock of cattle and sheep is considerable Bounded in the north by Kenya Colony from which it is separated by the Royuma river in the west by Transvaal and Rhodesia and in the south by Natal the country is chiefly maize producing but palm nuts nubber indigo coffee tobacco and sugar are also cultivated and exported It has on the whole an unhealthy climate and the white settler is affected by The Live Stock census estimates the cattle stock. of Nigeria at roughly 3 050 000 head the sheep stock at 1 607 000 and pigs at nearly 50 000 Cattle breeding is a source of income to the Exchequer as a tax is levied per head amounting to 1s 6d in some and 2s in the other Provinces irrespective of age or quality As this tax is sometimes felt rather cumbersome by the nomadic herd owners they often try to evade the same and for this reason it is possible that the number of cattle is considerably larger than officially stated Among the chief owners of the cattle herds are the Fulani descendants of the erstwhile herd owners and many of them have in recent years discarded their nomadic habits and taken up permanent homesteads and are now farming round about these Besides these Fulanis there are great numbers of natives who spend thir life trekking about with all their pos sessions over the greater part of the country changing their grazing grounds from time to time Cattle breeding is chiefly carried on in the Provinces of Kano Bornu Zaria and Bauchi but also in the Eastern

raising on the same scale as the other tribes seem to be immune. In the northern Provinces and eastwards beyond the Niger and Benue there are the changes in the day and night temperature Tectse fly is very prevalent permanently infesting certain districts which are shunned by the native breeders as Tsetse belts as their cattle perish when grazing there. Organised live stock breeding does not exist and few attempts have been made to import Pedigree stud animals Yet the country has many opportunities for the live stock man and when the question of immunising cattle has reached solution there is no reason why the Mozambique Territory should not prove suitable for live stock breeding on a big scale. Among live stock breeders interested in the importation of Pedigree strains the Sociedade Commerciale Agricola (Ltd.) of Lourenco Marqués should be mentioned

Livestock Breeding in Nigeria

where large herds could be maintained but where no cattle breeding at all exists owing to the Tsetse fly Other drawbacks to live stock breeding exist such as Rinderpest and various contagious diseases which militate against successful breeding but a battle is constantly being fought against these sicknesses and undoubtedly science will some day discover ways and means whereby these can be combated. The native cattle are indigenous to the country and scarcely of much value owing to in breeding having been carried on for ever so long The bulls are constantly running with the herds and indiscriminate breeding is the result Maturity is seldom reached before seven years and it requires a long time to fatten the beasts milk yield is extremely low but the fat percentage is remarkably high. As a general remark about cattle breeding in Nigeria it may be stated that the same lack of methods in handling the cattle and lack of attention to their needs that existed a hundred years ago prevails to day In spite of this backward state the Veterinary Department however holds that Western and Northern boundary districts of Nizeria one or two of the Nigerian breeds could be easily The Hausa tribe chiefly occupy themselves with improved by means of judicious selection and mating agriculture but on the whole do not take up stock As regards sheep breeding Nigeria offers many opportunities for an organised sheep industry and the its enormous territory about 346 000 square miles fecundity of the native sheep breeds is quite remarkable Nigeria holds out great promises of becoming a large There are three different types of sheep of which two live stock raising country and probably in the near are fairly good and could be considerably improved through crossing with a heavier type. The flocks are neglected and in breeding of course takes place future there will be a general improvement in breed ing methods as a result of the propaganda conducted by the Veterinary Department under the Colonial with the usual disastrous consequences. As for pig Government Thus in the Provinces of Sokoto and breeding quite a valuable industry could be promoted Kano there is now a general improvement in the through better stud animals. Nigeria with all its cattle stock Further south live stock breeding is many natural advantages is a country that deserves on a smaller scale owing to the prevalence of the Tsetse all the capital which of late is being spent on improve fly, a deadly insect against which scarcely any cattle

In the Northern Provinces a considerable of horses are bred but most of these have no very large tracts of land with most valuable pastures ticular value being bred under unsuitable 6-4

the products of repeated in breeding. In itself the material is not bad and if an extended system could be applied whereby the breeding methods were defined in accordance with rules issued by the Veterinary Department, and muting regul, ed locally through Stallion Depots there is no reason why the Nigerian horse should not become an animal of considerable utility while possessing commercial value. Glose to the Agerran frontier more care is desorted to the horse the result of the pride the inhabitants here take in their horses. In the mountainous rections a type of horse is bred, more of the pony type, hardy and of consider able strength and travellers who have had occasion to make use of these ponies describe them as quite good

Nigeria is a valt region of West Central Africa formerly administered by the Nizer company comprising a considerable number of native States with a very large population which probably now approaches 25 million in number. In January 1014 Niceria was divided for administrative purposes into three | chi f districts-\meria proper or rather the Colony the Northern and the Southern Provinces Together these three di tricts or main portions constitute the Protectorate Of course in a strict sense the Pro-tectorate is not British Termtors but for practical kernels ivory indigo and india rubber purposes Niceria is a British Colony as obviously no other civilised power will attempt any interference in its affairs. A very considerable portion of the country is covered by forests

The importance of Nigeria, commercially and agriculturally cannot be over-estimated and the popu lation of some of the largest towns is an indication of what has already been stated, i.e. that Nizeria is bound to develop as a huze live stock breeding country Thus the populations of the ten largest towns are

Livestock Breeding in Nyasaland

According to the official live stock census stock breeding is in a backward state, the cattle stock estimated at about 119,000 head, sheep at 68 000 and pigs at 32 000 It is however quite possible that the number of cattle is considerably larger. It is as an agricultural country that Nyasaland is bound to progress as there are no other resources available at least so There are no precious metals at least in any pay mg quantities Nyasaland has undoubtedly a future as an agricultural producer. The development of the Protectorate as far as can now be judged, must be along live stock producing cotton tobacco and tea cultivating lines The country consists of a stretch of land some 40 000 square miles in extent, and is thus among the smallest of the British Protectorates in Africa In length the country measures 520 miles in width from 65 to 100 miles. The boundaries inside which the British sphere of influence exists were fixed by a Convention with Portugal in June 1891 The boundaries are on the east, Lake Nyasa, on the south Portuguese East Africa, on the west North Eastern Rhodesia and on the north, Tanganyika Territory It should be divided geographically into a highland portion and the Lake Nyasa portion A considerable part of the country is mountainous. There are some considerable rivers-the Shire river the Ruo the Songwe, the Lintipe and the Rukuro rivers all of which develop large volumes of water in the wet season but in the dry are only sufficient for the canoe

When the last population census was taken the rumber of natives domiciled in Nyasaland was counted

generally tall quite intelligent people. These, however are divided into different tribes the Nyanja the Yac the Swahili the Angoni and the Anguru Cattl and sheep besides goats and pres in smaller numbers are reared by the natives all over the Protectorate The best cattle are bred in the Kotakota, West Nyas and North Nyasa districts parth also in the souther Angoniland and in the districts of Dowa, Dedza and Lilongwe The best breeders are the Wankonde tribe a cattle grazing tribe proud and independent with great love for their animals. In this breed distric many an excellent bull can be seen and the cows are well cared for by their owners during the lactation period These cattle are small bod ed, very compact, humped with short horns Towards the south in the Mombera district, the natives pay slight attention to the live stock but here the herds are considerably larger chiefly consisting of the long horned Afrikander type the bulls of which however often cross with the Wankonde cattle As in many other districts in Africa the Tsetse fly is doing incalculable harm. A certain disease known as East Coast Fever seems to be endemic in many districts and when it ravages the calves die ir enormous numbers and of course breeding is consider ably affected Very large stretches of land with splended pastures well watered and suntable for live stock raising are now lying almost waste owing to the prevalence of the Tsetse fly In the Angoni district large flocks of sheep and goats are bred In the Neno Dedza and Neheu districts where conditions are favourable for the white settler a good type of sheep as 1,200,000 all of which belong to the Bantu race is bred, and as conditions for producing good wool are here favourable, the whole district, according to the oninion of the Veterinary Department, Ising in one yest stretch of land, should prove particularly suitable for European settlers Spealing generally, the native sheep are not of wool producing strains, and therefore. the nucleus of a well paying sheep industry would have to be founded on imported animals. Probably the Welsh mountain sheep would prove a suitable animal for this purpose. Cattle raising should prove a paying proposition in the Highlands, but as the area is here limited and land fairly expensive, it might possibly turn out a non-paying venture. This is, however, a district excellently suitable for a dairy cattle industry Along the river in the Ruo district there is also much good grazing land available, and cattle do exceedingly well here. It is stated on good authority that the Tsetse fly is almost everywhere closing up the outlets for live store exports, and thus the old cattle track from Nyasaland to Rhodesia is now being completely shut up As there are no other outlets for the time being, the cattle breeder has only the markets within the Protectorate to rely on With a view of grading up the native cattle in districts where it should prove suitable, the Government have from time to time imported Pedigree bulls of the Sussex, Aberdeen-Angus Shorthorn and Hereford breeds, and lately also Afrikander bulls from Zambess and Zebu bulls from India, and a series of experiments has demonstrated that this is a practical measure Especially the Zebu, the Aberdeen-Angus and the Sussex crosses have turned out well. Shorthorn and Hereford crosses have not done quite so well because local conditions have not proved suitable. The native cattle are more often than not immune against tropical diseases, but when these are very severe they succumb

The cattle markets in Nyasaland have different requirements in regard to the type of cattle wanted, and thus local prices vary, such as from £12 to £18 for an ox trained for agricultural work. In the northern districts native bulls can be purchased from £x to £2 and cows from £2 to £4 apiece. Sheep and goats are entirely immune and thrive well even in the Tsetse infested district. The Government hold that imported sheep stand good chances of acclimatising as experience in the past has demonstrated that if properly protected and looked after, they easily survive. Interesting experiments have been made with crossing Merino rams on the indigenous sheep and the result has been increase of fecundity and a remarkable improvement in wool as well as in mutton. In the Angoni district a considerable number of pigs are bred, but outside this very few natives seem to care for this animal. As and when mixed farming comes more in some in the districts where the white settlers live, it is probable that pig breeding will develop on a much larger scale than at present For various reasons, but chiefly owing to fluctuations in markets, there have now for a number of years been periods of highly inflated prices for Nyasaland products, followed by periods of great depression, and this, of course, has its reaction on live stock breeding. The Government are trying to make dipping compulsory all over the country and to induce the natives to discard their useless wooden plough and unproductive farming methods, and the white settlers' habits and ways of doing things will undoubtedly by degrees be taken up by the natives.

The following list gives the names of some of the more important live stock breeding concerns in the Territory

Livestock Breeding in Réunion Island.

The Live Stock estimate states cattle 29,000, sheep 4,200, pigs 38,000, horses 1,600.

probably the number of pigs and cattle could be considerably increased if better breeds of farm stock were known, and therefore appreciated, among the farmers. The total area of the Island is about 800 square miles, with a population of about 200,000. Discovered during the early part of the sixteenth century by a Portuguese navigator, the island has long been a French colony, being administered by a Governor and a Council. The chief agricultural products are cane sugar, coffee, vanilla and tobacco. The soil is exceedingly fertile, and irrigation is arranged through an inter-com- cattle breeding.

The island is thus a breeder of some importance, but I municating water system based on the numerous rivers. The climate is quite pleasant and in the elevated districts salubrious, although the mean temperature is about 78°. Saint-Denis, the capital, is the seat of government. Once upon a time the whole island was covered by forests which, however, have disappeared to give room for the cane sugar plantations. There are no large plains, and erable farming is chiefly carried on in the valleys between the high mountain ranges. Magnificent pasturage exists all over the island, which in many respects is an ideal spot '

Livestock Breeding in Rhodesia.

The vast region in South Africa known as Rhodesia is divided into northern and southern Rhodesia erclosed by Angola the Congo British and Portuguese East Africa Transvaal Bechuanaland and the South West African territors. The Zambesi river divides Rhodesia into two portions One portion of Southern Rhodesia is unsuitable for cattle breeding owing to the prevalence of the Tsetse sh but the area over which this pest is not in existence is of considerable dimensions in fact nearly 145,000 square miles Southern Rhodesia bids well to become one of the largest cattle breeding districts on the African continent and breeders unstinted efforts to bring the stock industry into line with modern principles are bearing good fruit The Government are untiring in their efforts in this respect and thanks to a very prudent policy adopted some time ago in regard to land settlement, there are remarkably good opportunities for the would be settlers Thus one fifth of the whole term tory is being reserved for the natives while one fifth is already now occupied by European settlers mamh British and half of the area is still unalienated Nearly 14,000 000 acres are privately owned but scarcely utilised waiting for development. Land is therefore obtainable as and when the country further develops Rhodesia has already passed through the first stages of her development and undoubtedly this country affords solid advantages for those who will there take up agriculture and live stock breeding pur suits and are in possession of moderate capital

The last live stock census estimates the cattle stock at 2,364 000 head the sheep stock at 330 000 pigs at 54 000 and a small number of horses. Much of Rhodesia is splendidly watered and suitable for farming Wheat and rice grow well indeed and the coffee plant seems to thrive Rhodesian tobacco is now a commercial crop of some magnitude, and as the quality is excellent, there are many indications pointing towards Rhodesia becoming a large supplier to the international tobacco trade. The large stretches of stock which thrive here and develop good size and shady trees everywhere protect against the hot rays of the sun So rapidly has the Rhodesian live stock industry lately developed that the annual consump ion by the local towns and the shipping trade now can be met The yearly local consumption absorbs more than 100 000 head of cattle. Having adopted a very recorous dipping policy which is now everywhere ruthlessly carried out, Rhodesia is almost free from contagious cattle diseases From a very small commencement only a few years ago the Rhodesian cattle ranches have so quickly developed that there are now some fifty ranches holding 2000 or more head of cattle some 120 holding 1 000 or more and ten with 5 000 or more head. The indigenous cattle are slow maturing and small sized and require a fairly long time for fattening but they are extremely hardy and prolific and have proved good material for grading up Through experiments and resulting from fairly long experience of English breeders it is now stated on good authority that almost every British cattle breed is suitable for crossing with the indigenous breeds-the Matabele the Mashona and the Angoni cattle Probably the Hereford breed is the most suitable but Sussex. Red Pell Aberdeen Angus Lincoln Red and Devon bulls have been imported and proved suitable for grading up purposes. In the dairying districts of Southern Rhodesia there will gradually develop great scope for milk producing breeds such as Friesians Avrehires and Jerseys The Welsh black cattle should find a good demand as and when this excellent breed becomes better known A cross breed that seems to suit Rhodesian conditions and capable of crowing into big size while developing good fattening propensities. -the cross between the Afrikander native cattle and English bulls especially of the Hereford and Sussex breeds -deserves attention Sheep and pigs do just as vell and pig breeding has for the last few years attracted more attention from the smaller ranch owners Arable and mixed arable farming seems to absorb a tableland seem especially suitable for grazing of live greater area owing to the expanding local consumption

Livestock Breeding in Sierra Leone.

The Live Stock estimate for Sierra Leone states cattle 42 000 sheep 12 000 pigs 4 000 horses ---

Among the four colonies which now comprise British West Africa Sierra Leone is the oldest Once upon a time this colony was considered one of the richest countries on the African continent and ex plorers and adventurers from many countries chiefly from Holland England and France established trading stations on the coast from which slaves gold ivory and cattle hides were exported in very large quantities On the other hand few colonies have been so slandered in regard to the climate as Sierra Leone and while the climate certainly is not among the very best it is neither so had nor so murderous as is often stated Since 1827 the population has increased eight fold The total area is to-day 27 000 square miles It was declared a Protectorate in 1896 Politically Serra Leone is divided into a Colony and a Protectorate The last census was taken in 1921 when the population was estimated at 84 500 While in the Colony the language is English as are the laws and the faith Chris tian the population in the Protectorate comprise a number of different tribes such as the Mendes the Tempes the Foulahs the Konnos the Limbas etc most of whom are Mohammedans The total popu lation in the Protectorate according to the last census was then 1,456 000

The country is well watered through a number of rivers of which the Mano River forms the boundary between Sierra Leone and Liberia A railway now connects the capital Freetown with the terminus at Pendembu near the frontier of French Guinea and motor roads have been constructed between Freetown Waterloo and Lumley Beach From an agricultural point of view Sierra Leone is a producer of some magnitude An interesting farming system is in vogue known as shifting cultivation through which after a crop has been taken the soil is left to revert to bush and lie fallow for a number of years until it is again brought under cultivation. The main crop is rice and other crops are ginger cassava and potatoes While live stock breeding has not so far assumed any dimensions worth mentioning there are great possi-bilities and the Government Department for Lands and Forests in charge of a Commissioner with a Special Division for Agricultural Forestry are anxious to develop live stock breeding A good commencement has been made by means of educating the native to the value of live stock as a means of improving the fertility of his land and live stock farms are being inaugurated in various parts of the country. At the Government cattle farm in the Timne country satis factory progress has been made through grading up the native cattle with imported bulls. Sheep as well as pigs thrive well No live stock census has been taken It is chiefly in the northern Province that there are immediate prospects for extending live stock breeding on improved methods and the Commissioner of Lands and Forests states that the question of improvement of the indigenous cattle together with the importation of Pedigree stock is at present engaging the attention of his Department The development of Sierra Leone is closely connected with development in agricultural Research As one of the oldest centres of British influence in West Africa and one of the nearest tropical colonies to England with a steadily extending railway system Sierra Leone should soon forge ahead The three dominant features in the development of the colony native education transport facilities and scientific agriculture are now being given close attention by the Government, and as Sierra Leone has a unique harbour it may be hoped that the development of this important Colony may continue on sound lines

Livestock Breeding in Tanganyika.

According to the official census, the estimated cattle stock in the Tanganyika Territory is now nearly 4,000 000 head, and the sheep stock is, likewise, approaching 4,000 000. The number of pigs is unknown, and in any case very insignificant, and of horses few are bred. The future development of this vast, interesting territory undoubtedly lies along the road leading to a highly developed live stock industry. The natives in the territory are keen live stock industry. The natives in the territory are keen live stock industry settlements of German Dutch and French farmers and breeders act as an eve-opener to the native as to what can be done through good methods, and the example seems to be bearing fruit.

The Veterinary Department, Tanganyika Territory, has on several occasions reported a greatly increased export of hides and skins, testifying to the fact that the Department's untiring efforts in encouraging the natives to adopt better methods in breeding their herds and flocks are bearing fruit, Pedigree bulls of various strains have been imported, and the natives are having their eyes opened to the great possibilities of increasing their welfare through better methods in stock breeding. The arch enemy of the live stock is, of course, the Tsetse fly Practically speaking, there is only a broad, central stretch of land, lying north to south and covering less than one third of the total area of the territory which is free from this pest. In this stretch of land the live stock is crowded—as a point of fact there are more cattle grazing here than the district can properly sustain and therefore very often many a cattle breeder takes his courage in both hands and moves his cattle into the Tsetse fly areas in search of grazing when the season is dry, hoping against fear that nothing may happen Veterinary Department is fighting an unceasing battle against this insect, hoping finally to destroy it. Rinderpest is however, the chief source of trouble In 1923 it ravaged terribly in the large district lying between the River Rusha and the central railway system The Veterinary Department has been drawing a cordon along the river to prevent the plague reaching the remarkably rich Iringa district, a measure that has proved very successful. These drawbacks, however, can only be overcome through scientific research. and very valuable such is continuously being undertaken at the Vetermary Pathological Institute at Mpapua

Not long ago the Tanganyika Government adopted a policy in regard to Native Administration, the pronouncement of which caused considerable interest not only in the territory but in all other territories in South and East Africa. There is a belt of Tablelands stretching from Cape Town all the way to Nairobi on which conditions for white settlers are favourable. The problem of securing a permanent future for the white settler in Africa is bound up with the possibilities for him to create a living and an acceptable existence. Government for his family, and the solution is, to day, as it has always been and will remain for many years how to adjust the relation between him and the black races There are now 14 millions of white people in South Africa, some 37,000 in Southern Rhodesia some 6,000 in Northern Rhodesia, probably 1,700 in Nyasaland, 14,000 in Kenya Colony and 3,500 in Tanganyika When recently it was decided to open fresh areas in the Tanganyika Territory for white settlement, it was officially recognised that forces of circumstances and the "White man's problem" are now irresistible The problem of Tanganyika therefore, is really the problem of the whole of South Africa While the proportion of black to white in South Africa is 4 to 1. in Tanganyika Territory it is 1,500 to 1 From this proportion it is evident that Tanganyika would never be able to develop its magnificent natural resources. should the blacks die out or fall a burden to the Government-indeed, any calamity happening to the black population would immediately cause a grave financial crisis and an economical upheaval, obviously reflecting on the well being of the white settlers This problem. everywhere in the forefront where the white settlers work in the territories of the black population, is perhaps more evident in Tanganvika than elsewhere The Tanganyika Government, in adopting this well considered policy, have, therefore, largely contributed to solving the "Black—White Problem" The new policy rests on four corner stones-1, native contentment to satisfy which the natives must be given an absolute sense of security in regard to their land This has been done in close communication with the native Chiefs Then, z, the natives are entitled to a seat and representation in the body politic To-day they are better educated they think for themselves and their thoughts form different view points, to deny them political participation would be unwise, perhaps dangerous. Their minds must be occupied. and with this in view, it is part of the Tanganyila Government policy to support the Chiefs in their politically important position as such, so that their traditional power to control and punish their tribes can be preserved Further 3 the Government are encouraging agriculture and live stock production and the Administrative Officers are told to exercise their greatest efforts towards inducing the natives to become producers of exportable crops and of food in excess of their own individual requirements Furthermore 4, part of the new policy tends to ameliorate the social conditions under which the native population This has been done in several ways, through agricultural and live-stock breeding measures, through education, through sanitation and through more social intercourse between whites and natives, and so on Public health first and last, is the mainstay of wellbeing and this is having the undivided attention of the

In the Southern highlands of Tanganyika an area of 2.500 000 acres was recently thrown open to the white settlers Thus three new Districts are now available for the would be settler te the Sau district in the Irinea territors the Ubena Highlands in the New Niombe district and the Mbosi in the Myeva territory The Ubena Highland district is probably one of the most valuable sheep grazing districts in the whole of Africa. Here remarkably good sheep are bred by the natives and wheat is cultivated in very considerable quantities while further south in this district excellent coffee is cultivated. The Sau area is lying astride the Iringa Malangali Tukuyu road commencing some forty miles south west of the Iringa township while at its nearest point it is some two hundred miles distant from the Tanganyika central line. This land is exceedingly fertile suitable for grazing dairy eartle or mixed or arable farming while there is excellent tobacco land In the Mbosi area the coffee bush attains wonderful development and here also very large stretches of land are suitable for cattle and sheep breeding. When the new road system now planned re a road constructed from leals to the port of Kitute on Lake Tanganyika to enable the producers in the Mbosi area to transport their products by road to Kituta and then by the lake steamer to Kigoma so that they can make use of the railway system to Dar es Salaam is completed great possibilities open up for the settlers

Livestock Breeding in Tripolitania and Cyrenaica

The Live Stock estimate in Tripoli and Cyrenaica states cattle 46 000 sheep 1 058 000 pigs 1 200. horses 5 400

The country now known under this name is a remarkable illustration of Italian enterprise in North Africa as among all the north African countries this is the only one that has been very scantily favoured by nature Not very long ago Italian statesmen held the opinion that the country was only a heap of sand under a blazing sun without any possibilities for developing as rains seldom fall here but after having sent a committee of experts to explore the possibili ties it was reported that there are 2 400 000 hectares of land worth cultivation. It was pointed out that France had overcome similar difficulties in their North African Provinces and it has been satisfactorily demonstrated that with sufficient capital in Northern Tripolitania alone nearly half a million people could be maintained through the cultivation of olives Together with live stock breeding an eminent expert S gnor Emanuelo de Cillis recently stated a nett revenue of more than two milliards of Lire can be counted with when certain measures now recommended by the Committee have been carried through When it is born in mind that Tripolitania in the Roman days was one of the European granaries and that some of the very best horses then known on the continent of Europe were bred here there seems to be good reason to support the expert's optimistic conclusion. The plan for developing the country has now been in the course of execution for nearly seventeen years and what seemed impossible to commence with is now proved to be possible. The Italians seem to have settled their outstanding difficulties with the Arabs and the Berbers and by inducing a number of Italian colonists to settle here chiefly Sicilians there is now an atmosphere of prosperity over this Italian Colony So far the Italian Government have assisted these colonists to cultivate 150 000 acres and the acreage will be moving about in the country to is increasing every year. There is no

for the speculator but the thrifty farmer is welcomed and granted concessions on easy terms as a rule spread over ten to fifteen years The Government are lending money for a length of thirty years at the rate of 24% and assist the cultivator by selling him agricultural machinery and tools on very easy terms, while naving him a premium for every acre cultivated Already now satisfactory crops of barley and olives can be seen and experiments in wheat cultivation are carried on The main point is a continued supply of water and where such is regulated excellent crops of almonds. apricots figs oranges tobacco castor oil etc are harvested Bearing in mind that it is only seventeen years since the Italians captured this country from the Turks the progress so far made is very noteworthy Tripolitania has turned the corner and should develop to become a not unimportant factor in the North African food supplies The Italian Government recently started a Stud with a view of encouraging horse breeding having decided on the breeding of horses of Berberine blood with a small admixture of Arab blood All exports of horses have been prohibited for a term of ten years and a number of prominent stallions of this horse type have been imported from Tunisia. It is chiefly as a sheep breeding country that one may look towards Trip-litania from the live stock breeding point of view

As regards cattle it is far too early to express any opinion whether the country is suitable for cattle breeding It is decidedly so for sheep and pig breeding and it should be possible to develop both as conditions are here very much the same as in Tunisia By a recent decree the Government issued regula tions for the inauguration of an Agricultural? Office through which travelling agricultural for the live stock Experimental Station at Sidi Mesri In the future the entire control and supervision of live stock breeding will be in charge of the Agricultural Propaganda Office A report has been issued by the Sidi Mesri Station regarding selection of stud animals for the improvement of existing live stock based on zootechnical observations The Government seem to be confident that the sheep breeding industry can be considerably developed if certain methods in breeding are adopted The present sheep stock con sists of so called Barbary sheep indigenous to the country and through a recent examination of the wool production of these sheep and the local wool markets the conclusion has been drawn that the sheep stock must be divided into three classes which should be subjected to different control with a view of classifying the Cyrenaica wool and thereby obtain better prices Thus in the pre desert region the wool of the Barga el Beida sheep is white or whitish while the wool from the sheep in the Mediterranean region where the soil is red the Barga el Mamra sheep is red or reddish The third classifying category of sheep is still undecided but seems to comprise sheep which yield brown or black wool All the wool is coarse and generally marketed in a very dirty condition but it has been proved that a substantial trade can be obtained with factories turning out coarse fabrics blankets and mattresses. The fleeces owing to the wool curls being long and conical sell well the average weight of the fleece reaching 2 kilos. It is intended to concentrate the home wool trade, at Derna and Bengasi

The stock man who might be interested in exporting stud animals to the country would find much of interest and it is stated that the local Government are anxious to facilitate the import of suitable animals. Lack of labour seems however to be the most serious obstacle to the economic development of Tripolitania as the Arabs seem to hold aloof Once however the native Chiefs make up their minds that Italy has come to stay the labour problem will probably be solved and these tribes among which there is a number in possession of considerable wealth may possibly take up Pedigree breeding as a regular occupation stated however that the Italian Government are severely taxing the tribes Among the well to-do tribes such as the extremely wealthy Nwahi el Arbaa with 7 500 members each of whom is the owner of a number of live stock and several similarly situated tribes many would be interested in improving their stock through crossing the same with valuable stud animals

Livestock Breeding in Tunis.

According to the latest Live Stock Census the number of cattle is estimated at 38 too the sheep stock at 1 500 000 the pig stock at about 16 000 and horses 82 000 Sheep breeding thus forms the chief branch of the live stock industry but probably the pig holds the pride of place among the Tunisan farmers although the present stock seems indiculously low

As regards cattle breeding the diversity of types and breeds is remarkable and it is probable that there has been an influx of bulls from other countries The French Normandy cattle seems to have influenced the indigenous cattle as this type can be traced here and there Sheep breeding although a permanent source of income to the farmers is carried on in a very neglectful manner and the sheep are alternately well maintained on rich pastures or half starved when these give way during the dry season. As for pig breeding, the Tunisian pig is a nondescript animal with blood infusion from Italian Spanish Maltese and Algerian boars The type most in vogue is the red white Roman pig but in the eastern parts of the country the Neapolitan black white piz is prevalent. Breeding of sheep is chiefly carried on in the districts of Belia and Suk-el Arba and partly also in the district of Tabarka Large swine herds can also be seen in these districts and as for cattle breeding while there is no system in breeding and the cattle are herded on the grazing lands and driven from place to place lately attempts have been undertaken by European settlers to maintain animals of good milk yield as the sale of milk is a highly profitable trade. There is certainly country is ino intamosa, a good field for the live stock man who could commence a breeding business by cheaply acquiring animals of the indigenous breeds and through grading-up and crossing with valuable stud animals in time work up a profitable living. The General Director of Agriculture Tunis is anxious to introduce a better system on the Tunissan farms but meets with scant interest on the part of the farmers who prefer to carry on their occupation in the same slipshod manner as their fathers d.d. Tunisa offers very it any good opportunities for the European settler as every product resulting from live stock breeding finds a ready market locally

Formerly known as one of the Barbery States Tunisia is now a French Protectorate with 52 000 square miles Physiographically the divided into four districts or regions -a district north of the Mejerda River e the Algerian frontier to the Gulf of T fertile district which forms the ing between Tripoli and Cape district at an elevation of pastures stretching from the plain of Kairwain called Shott Kebir in with lack of water as formed part of the last mentioned dis have existed si ce ti considerable source elevation of 6.500 ft. Tunisia has many features in common with Algeria, and although the country is to-day in a generally neglected state, it could undoubtedly be brought to a high yield of agricultural and other products as in ancient times it was one of the most important granaries of the Roman people Agriculture and live stock breeding is still the chief industry of the people, and as wheat, barley and oats are here and there grown, giving not only quantitatively a good yield, but grain of excellent quality, the backward state can only be explained as owing to antiquated methods in tilling the land. Olive cultivation is general, and it is stated that the Tunisian olives rank among the best in the world Although the summer heat is intense, the climate is on the whole quite healthy. being tempered by sea breezes. A very good type of camel is bred in Tunisia, and the goats have a certain commercial value in the neighbouring countries owing to their high milk yield. Tunisian mules were not so long ago highly appreciated all over North Africa. The population is entirely Oriental, now reaching about 2,200,000, consisting of Italian settlers and Jews of all nationalities, and Arabs, Moors and Berbers. The French element is estimated at 45,000, chiefly soldiers and sailors. The commercial element is chiefly represented by international Jews, and many of these derive substantial income through financing pig and sheep breeders on a fifty-fifty basis. The capital city. Tunis, is one of the most ancient towns in the world, but of its former splendour, so often described by medieval travellers, little is to be seen

Livestock Breeding in Uganda.

The official Live Stock Census estimates the cattle stock at 1,373 000 head, and the sheep stock at 880,000 As for pigs and horses, the absence of these animals is remarkable. Cotton is the chief crop assuming every year larger proportions, while other crops such as coffee, cocoa ground nuts, sim sim, tobacco, sugar cane, rice, cassava, tea, castor oil, peas and beans are cultivated on a steadily increasing acreage. Of late years the exports, according to available statistics for certain articles, show lower figures, owing to disorganisation in transport etc., caused by the war, but the corner has recently been turned and there is nothing now militating against the steady development of this interesting Colony Uganda was formerly a native kingdom, but since the British flag was acknowledged as the symbol of British protection, this vast territory has in name as well as in fact become a Protectorate Geographically, it adjoins British Sudan, the Congo Free State and Kenya Colony In the Uganda territory the Victoria Nyanza, the Albert Nyanza, Lake Choga and Lake Rudolf are included The area is probably about 92,000 square miles, mostly plateau lands with a very salubrious climate Minerals abound, and since time immemorial the natives have understood the art of turning iron ore found in the soil into articles of every day use Only recently, several tribes of negro dwarfs were discovered, populating the forests bordering on the Congo, and along the Semlika river where the number of the population has not been defined, it is now known that a race of lilliputs exists The Bantu language is chiefly spoken by the population which probably now reaches well over four million. The most intelligent among the various tribes are the Baganda people The chief articles of trade, besides ivory and rubber, are live stock and live stock products, such as hides and skins Cattle and sheep are bred in all the districts, the country being divided into five districts, the Buganda, the Rudolf, and the Eastern, Western and Northern districts The cattle are large sized, valuable and deserving of improvement. Over 95% of the known cattle stock is of the humped type, closely resembling the Indian Zebu breed and therefore, undoubtedly originating from India The best cattle are bred in the Northern districts, here called the Teso breed, while farther towards the south another breed, the Karamojan, dominates, undoubtedly the best developed of all the breeds in Uganda, of larger size and better appearance and perhaps with shorter horns than the other breeds. In the Ankole and Antoro districts a very different breed of cattle exists, called Nsagalla cattle, large-sized, of a deep red colour, with very large forms and scarcely showing any hump. This breed is an interesting illustration of the fact that very often, through natural self-selection among the best developed animals in an indigenous breed, the problem of the survival of the fittest seems to have regulated operations in 1813 and continued them until his death in 1867 Edwin Hammond of Middlebury Vermont enjoyed wide distinction as a noted improver of the American Merino from 1844 until 1870 George Campbell of Westminster West Vermont was one of the earliest importers and improvers of the Merino In 1851 he imported to New and Rambouillet York some Silesian Merinos which had been bred purely from the Infantado Negretti family In 1863 Mr. Campbell exhibited twelve Merino sheep, bred at his Vermont establishment at the International Exhibition at Hamburg His was the only American flock on exhibition and they were in competition with 913 Merinos from France Italy Austria Russia and Germany He succeeded in taking two first and one second premiums. These twelve sheep were sold to Count Shen Thors of Silesia for five thousand dollare

The American Merino Sheep Breeders Association was the first sheep reg stry organization to be perfected in the United States It was organized in Ohio in 1875 and blood lines acceptable for registration were restricted to flocks tracing in unbroken lines to the original Spanish importations and excluded any admixture of blood lines originating from importations from France or Saxony The Vermont Merino breeders perfected a similar organization during the late seven Since the early American improvers of the Merino had no generally accepted type set as a goal very naturally several distinct types were developed in the early days of the finewool industry. The Vermont breeders selected the breeding stock from the standpoint of weight and density of fleece. Wrinkles or skin folds were developed and intensified and this no doubt at a considerable sacrifice of uniformity of quality and length of staple Merino breeders in Western Pennsylvania West Virginia Ohio and other States bred along plainer lines perhaps giving more consideration to constitution and conformation of the animals as well as to the quality and length of In consequence of these variations in the type of the Merinos in the different sections new record associations were organized from time to time until in 1904 when there were some nineteen or twenty Merino registry organizations actually func A marked forward step was taken by the American Merino breeders in 1906 when a meeting of the representatives of the numerous Merino registry associations was called at Columbus Ohio for the purpose of perfecting one strong organization The present day American and Delaine Merino Record Association was the outcome of that meeting The new association recognized all organizations which had been recording Merinos tracing back to the original importations from Spain regardless of It was decided to designate the different type Merinos as As Bs and Cs instead of continuing to use all of the names heretofore used. The A type is the extremely wrinkled one the B type perhaps has a little more scale than the A with rather heavy folls on neck flanks thighs and at tail head-the sheep not later than some time during the 17th century sides being comparatively free from prominent folds while the C type which is generally referred to as a Delaine Merino should be free from folds other than on the neck and should show a good flank as well as being free from folds on the thighs. The American and Delaine Merino Record Association credited with more than 600 active members who are actively engaged in the production of Merinos in all parts of the United States

American Rambouillet Sheep Breeders was organized in 1889 at Pontiac Association Michigan The present membership totals nearly eleven hundred with total registrations of 221 425 Rambouillet sheep Registrations during the past year totalled 20 753 and Pedigrees are now being accepted for the 46th volume

International von Homever Rambouillet Club Record was perfected in Detroit Michigan in December 1902 Under the rules of that organiza tion no sheep whose breeding did not trace in unbroken line through sire and dam directly to the von Homeyer flock was eligible for registration. Only one record volume was issued by the yon Homever Record Association although it is important to here emphasize the fact that this strain of Rambouillets has played a prominent role in the development and improvement of the American Rambouillet to the present standard of perfection that has now been attained

Among the more prominent breeders who have contributed their skill toward the improvement of the American Rambouillet were Thomas Wyckoff Davis burgh Michigan A A Wood & Sons Saline Michi W G Markham Avon NY Orth Brothers McGuffey Ohio F S King Brothers Laramie Wyoming John Seeley Mt Pleasant Utah R A Jackson Dayton Washington and Bullard Brothers The late W S Hansen Woodland California Collinston Utah was one of the first American breeders to devote his attention toward the development and improvement of the polled Rambouillet This I ne of breeding was taken up a number of years ago by Mr T L Drisdale Juno Texas who during more recent years has developed an outstanding polled Rambouillet producing a high yielding clp of staple wool of a quality probably unsurpassed in America

Although the sheep industry of America dates back to the time of the early settlement of the Spanish Colonists it is believed that no real improvement was made in the sheep breeding operations until after the importation of the finewool sheep to America about 1800 It is estimated that there were approximately 5 000 000 sheep in the United States at the beginning of the 19th century By 1840 this number had in creased to more than 19 000 000 head producing 35 804 000 pounds of wool per annum. Of this num ber 18 807 000 were reported to have occupied ranges east of the Mississippi while only slightly more than 503 000 grazed on the ranges west of the Mississippi The Spanish territory now designated as the State of New Mexico is known to have been stocked with

It is generally known that the sheep owned by the Spaniards in this territory were of Spanish origin, but all writers are not in agreement as to the breeding Some authorities believe that the of these sheep early Spanish sheep consisted of Merinos, at least in part. However, it is quite generally believed that these sheep were a coarse wool type that sheared a very light fleece of wool It is said that in 1750 sheep formed the chief element of agriculture in New Mexico Spanish sheep were introduced into California as early as 1773 although any real improvement in the breeding of the sheep in these States did not begin much before 1850 The first blooded Merino rams are reported to have been driven across country from Kentucky to New Mexico in 1850 by a Mr George Giddings

New Mexico was the first chief source of supply of breeding ewes for the western range States, and beginning in 1852 large numbers of these sheep were driven to California and in later years to the northwestern range States Beginning in the early eighties, large numbers of the New Mexico sheep were driven to Texas The fleece weights of the unimproved Mexican sheep averaged around 1.5 pounds at that They were a hardy strain and were able to withstand the unfavourable range conditions that they very frequently met. They responded very readily to the improvement sought through the use of the improved Merino rams on the Mexican ewes and the first cross is said to have yielded almost twice as much wool as the unimproved dams The prices realized for the unimproved Mexican sheep during the early eighties were sometimes very small, however, it enabled the men of small means to at least acquire a small number of these sheep, which they might possibly not have been able to do had the prices been higher

Mutton was a secondary consideration of the sheep breeders east of the Mississippi River until the prices of wool began to drop after the Civil War However, the decreasing profits of wool growing and the increasing popularity of mutton as a food have effected a considerable change during the ensuing years By 1890 one half of the sheep between the Alleghanies and the Mississippi River were estimated to be carrying mutton blood the Eastern breeders leaving the task of the production of finewool to the western range States The English Breeds were formerly objected to by flockmasters operating on the western ranges due to the fact that (1) they are not sufficiently hardy to thrive under the severe range conditions under which the industry must be conducted (2) they cannot be as successfully herded in large flocks as the finewool Breeds , (3) their fleeces are inclined to be torn out by the brush , and (4) the English mutton Breeds are not as well adapted to the climatic conditions maintaining on the south western ranges as are the finewool Breeds

Wool production was one of the primary objects of the flockmasters who engaged in the early range sheep business In those days the industry was not on a lamb marketing basis, consequently, as a general rule aged ewes and wethers were the only classes of bodied finewool sheep of desirable mu surplus stock offered for sale. In 1011 practically 100 per cent, of the ewe flocks of Arizona, California, Washington, and Wyoming represented the finewool type, while the percentage of finewool ewes in the States of Oregon, Colorado Nevada Montana, Idaho, Utah, and New Mexico ranged from 04 to 52 per cent

During the past twenty-five years the western and north-western range flockmasters have followed a general practice of cross breeding for the purpose of producing an early maturing lamb, possessing a desirable mutton conformation In attaining this end the Rambouillet ewe flocks in Wyoming, Utah, Montana and to a certain extent in Idaho, have been bred to Cotswold, Lincoln, Leicester, and Romney rams Replacement ewe stock was obtained from finewool breeders residing in areas not so well adapted to crossbreeding, however, in the space of a few years finewool ewes became too scarce to supply the demand. consequently the breeders found it necessary to turn again to the finewool rams in order to correct some of the apparently outstanding faults of their cross bred ewes, which were namely (1) the loss of the herding instinct. (2) the coarse open fleece that was too easily torn out by the brush Since the World War the demand for wool has been fairly strong and there has been a general tendency among the north-western range breeders to resort again to a rather liberal use of Rambouillet rams The larger operators as a general rule follow a practice of mating their coarser fleeced ewes to finewool rams and the finer woolled ewes to longwool rams A number of Idaho and Washington flockmasters have during recent years followed a general practice of breeding cross bred finewool longwool ewes to Hampshire rams for the purpose of obtaining an early maturing lamb which fattens and develops on the bountiful mountainous summer ranges in time for the midsummer market

Practically all the western lambs reaching the feeder markets carry varying proportions of finewool or Merino blood. The range sheep industry has neces sarily been builded upon the Merino foundation due to their general hardiness, wide range of adaptability to practically all types of ranges Mr F R Marshall Secretary of the "National Wool Growers Association." estimates that between 65 and 70 per cent of the sheep of the United States are of Menno (finewool) foundation. It is estimated that approximately 37 per cent of the sheep of the United States are either of pure or high grade finewool breeding

In western Texas, Arizona and Southern New Mexico a large per centage of the flocks are of fine wool breeding The finewool Breeds seem much better adapted than the mutton Breeds to withstand the hot summer temperatures which prevail in the South-The finewool sheep furthermore are not only better able to withstand droughty conditions that frequently prevail in this region, but owing to their general hardiness they can also better withstand the ravages of the internal parasites. An increasing num of Texas range sheep men are breeding a large at formation which at the same time is capable of producing 8 to 10 pounds of fine staple wool. Many breeders are apparently successfully crossing the Mermos and Rambouillets for the purpose of increasing the size on the Mermo side and at the same time increasing the length of staple where a deficiency in this respect exists.

In general contrast to the herding system as practised by the representative wool growers in all of the other range States the Texas flocks are in most instances grazed in enclosed pastures or paddocks and the methods of management are similar to the Australian practices. This method offers several advantages important among which are that (1) the ranges will carry an increased number of livestock (2) the wool produced under such conditions is of lighter shrinkage and (3) once the ranges have been fenced the sheep can be carried at a lower cost per head per annum

Each year upwards of 600 000 smooth bodied Texas lambs of finewool breeding weighing 55 to 75 pounds at weaning time are shipped to the feed lots in the corn belt States at prevailing market prices paid for cross bred lambs in the Northwest It is true that the contractors who take over these lambs register considerable complaint about excessive skinfolds etc and some of them are not at all backward in urging the use of mutton rams. The Texas range sheep breeders however have the range management prob lems well in hand and have been disinclined to accept the advice of the lamb speculators Many largeTexas operators follow the practice of breeding the more heavily folded type of finewool ewes to smooth bodied finewool rams and of mating the smooth bodied ewes to heavier type rams. As a result of this practice remarkably uniform smooth bodied lamb crop is generally produced

A general criticism that is quite generally applic able to the sheep breeders of the United States is that many of them are inclined to overlook the im portance of yield of clean wool per head Through all the many years since the introduction of finewool sheep to America breeders have been too prone to discuss the fleece weights in terms of grease pounds Many breeders even to this day become entirely lost in the discussion of the average fleece weight figured on a clean or scoured basis Yet this is a very important point for them to bear in mind since they are selling their product to buyers on a clean yield basis Further more it is not unusual to find that a number of the ewes in a flock are producing less than half as much wool as the top half of the flock The better strains of Rambouillet ewes in Texas are known to have pro duced better than six pounds of scoured wool during a 12 months growing period Therefore is it not well worth the while of the progressive breeders to study the capabilities of their flocks in order that they might have an opportunity to enjoy an increased income as a result of an increased yield of clean wool per head due to intelligent culling and breeding? A wool and mohair scouring plant was established at the Texas Agricultural and Mechanical College Experiment Station in 1919 through the assistance of the 'Sheep and Goat Raisers Association of Texas to the end that Texas flockmasters might gain additional en lightenment upon the subject of improving their wool and mohair clips Thousands of samples of wool have already been scoured since the installation of the This has not only given the wool growers an opportunity to better familiarize themselves with the quality, length of staple and shrinkage of their respective clips but the work has had its influence in causing the buyers to more closely estimate the snrinkages of the clips in the various regions from which samples originate. Upon taking up the study of fleece samp ling the question. What amount of wool constitutes a representative sample and how may it be fairly and impartially drawn? immediately presented itself No data bearing upon this subject were available at the beginning of this study In brief numerous methods of sampling were studied however the results of these wool scouring studies with finewool sheep shoved that 25 fleeces from sheep impartially selected will have a shrinkage sure to be in practically all cases within two per cent of the true value for the entire

Other agencies at work in the interest of the ad vancement of the American sheep industry are the National Wool Growers Association and various State sheep associations The National Association has for many years looked after the interests of the range wool growers in all matters of legislation pertaining to grazing on the public domain shipping rates, increased lamb consumption etc. The State organiza tions in the West have the strong backing of all the leaders of the industry and at the present time many State organizations through the leadership of the National Wool Growers Association are giving con siderable thought and study to the wool marketing problem This is a timely problem to demand the attention of the leaders of the industry since the average individual wool grower is not qualified to trade intelligently with the skilled buyer. The advant ages gamed through a sound marketing system have been clearly illustrated in Texas in which State during the past 18 years marketing agencies have been set up by growers at San Angelo Del Rio and other Wools are consigned to these houses and sub jected to buyers for sale on the basis of grades in the judgment of the selling committees the bids are too low they are rejected and another sale is scheduled for a later date This method of marketing has offered considerable protection to the growers and the result has been that during the past several years Texas wools have been commanding prices slightly above those being paid for range wools in other western states

The Annual Ram Sale yearly held at Salt Lake City under the auspices of the National Wool Growers Association is playing a prominent part in the improvement of the range sheep in the western part of the United States Here stud rams are brought together from all parts of the United States and buyers

thus have an opportunity to go over them carefully before making their selection. Following the example set by the National Association a number of State organizations have adopted the policy of holding annual sales. The Annual Texas Ram Sale which is held under the auspices of the Sheep and Gost Raisers. Association has developed to be one of the largest of its kind in the country. It is unique in that a sifting committee of well qualified sheep growers pass on all entires disqualifying all animals that fail to meet the requirements spec for stud and range rams respectively.

Perhaps no more conservative answer can be given to the question of future finewool values than that given by Messrs Winchcombe Carson Limited

in their Annual Wool Review for 1927

The question is will the world continuously absorb the ordinary run of Merino wools at recent figures. The scales between under supply and over supply and if the future price over supply are del cately balanced. Even a limited quantity one way or the other can have an appreciable influence on values. The world's population is certainly increasing. The number of people who use wool has advanced materially the dawn of the Christian era

But we are of the opinion that the distant future of prices for average Merino wool hinges to the greatest extent on an advance or otherwise in the quantity grown in Australia

Merinos comprise about two-thirds of Australia s vast sheep flocks That Commonwealth in 1920-21 produced 1 635 186 bales of wool and by 1920-27 the production had risen to 2,500 000 bales—a rise of 52 per cent

The finewool breeds have not only undergone a pronounced improvement since their introduction into the United States but they have constituted the foundation of the cross bred lamb industry which has been so extensively engaged in during the past 25 to 30 years in the Western States Since it has been estimated that there will still remain 615 million acres of permanent range grazing land in this country after every potential tillable area has been placed under cultivation it is obvious that the sheep grazing industry in the western United States is a permanent The flockmasters of the United States are enjoying an adequate Tariff protection against im ported wool and woollen materials at the present time and if the future prices of their sales products are sufficiently high to enable them to earn a comfort able living they will at the same time be better able to lend their skill as breeders towards the advancement of the breed which has remained in the first rank since

The Percheron Horse in America

By ELLIS McFARLAND Secretary Percheron Soc ety of America

Two thirds of the pure bred draught horses of the United States are Percherons and the Percheron Society of America is the largest purebred horse record Associat on in the world. How the breed has attained such popularity in the less than 90 year period since the first Percheron horse was imported from France is an absorbing story.

An American traveller Edward Harris of Moores town NJ saw and admired the hardy fast moving French dil gence horses and made an in tial importation in 1839. Out of seven horses imported on two occasions by Mr Harris only two mares and a stallion survived the trip. Though the stallion Dll gence sired a large number of good colts these an mals did not make a lasting impression on draught horse breeding.

in the United States

Percheron history in America really began in 1851 with the importation of two stallions. Louis Napoleon, and Normandy The latter was better known as Old Pleasant Valley Bill. The importer was Dr. Marcus Brown Circleville Ohio and his agent was Samuel Holman Chester Springs Pa. The ancestry of the two famous stallions is not recorded but they were both greys. Grev stallions were used in the district now known as. The Perche. as early as 1800.

Louis Napoleon is especially noted as a size responsible for early Percheron prestige. From early ridicule he climbed to horse fame and it is estimated that from him some 400 foals were bred before his death in 1871. His male progeny were kept as stall lions and sold at high prices. His descendants were all grade horses but their diraftness and good action brought farmer allegiance to the Percheron breed.

By 1870 a total of 90 stallions and 21 mares is definitely recorded as having been imported and draught horse production was established on a commercial bas is During the next to years 874 stallions and 125 mares were imported. The main object was still that of improving the common stock of the country but breeders produced in Amenca pure-breds totalling 104 stallions and 115 mares in the decade. Breeders and importers alike made every effort to combine the true Percheron size and quality with unusual symmetry style action spirit and courage.

The National Association of Importers and Breeders of Norman Horses was organised in 1876 at a meeting at Clucago Illinois and late in the year the "Norman Stud Book was published. A ed uon was called the "Percheron Norman This was the first Druswith Horse Reguter ever and was preceded as a horse register only

General Stud Book in England Percheron replaced Norman as a designation for the breed when horsemen realized that the former term is the more accurate. The true type is that found in the Perche District in France

An extraordinary period of expansion in Per cheron importing and breeding in America was in augurated in 1881 and it continued until 1890 The number of importers was trebled and the number of breeders increased more than tenfold. During this time 4 988 stallions and 2 566 mares were imported and 1 020 stallions and 2 089 mares were bred in America

It was a profitable decade Depression in the value of work horses was so great during the 1801–1900 period of hard times in the United States that the incentive to breed better horses was largely lost and the registration of colts was neglected Breeders were financially unable to keep many of the good studs and the most noticeable direct effect was a widespread distribution of Percheron mares The number of breeders increased from 503 to 1 634 Many of the new owners were mexperienced handlers and the breed was damaged. Only hardiness adapt through to survival and a steady increase in popularity The twentieth century brought improved busi ness conditions Percheron breeders re organized and the name of the group evolved to Percheron Society of America British purchases after the Boer war stimulated the horse market and by 1910 values had again reached pre panic levels. An enor mously increased number of quality horses were pro

ability and easy keeping qualities pulled Percherons duced During the World war it was estimated that 75 per cent of the artillery and transport horses used on two Percheron stallions and some brood mares were exported to England

Another period of depression is apparently disap pearing at the present time. The strain was never so great as the disasters of the nmeties was never a time when a high class horse would not bring a good price but the average kind sold low Percherons outnumbered all other draught horse breeds at the great 1927 International Live Stock Exposition in Chicago and they sold for more money than all other draught breeds combined. An initial exportation has been made to South America, and there is a brisk trade with Canada

Percheron popularity in America is based on the practical draught horse requirement of utility. Heavy muscling good action clean legs and an admirable disposition have enabled horses of the breed to pass many a durability test. The mares have been un usually prolific many have produced ten foals some more Percherons stand the wear and tear of years of hard work and are easy keepers. Ability to breathe freely has made the horse many friends in hot climates

The last census report says that there are in the United States 70 613 Percherons 10 838 Belgians 5 580 Shires 4,221 Clydesdales and 2 938 French drafters This means that of 94 188 pure bred draught horses owned in the United States 74.9 per cent are Percherons These Government figures do repre sent a fairly accurate estimate of the relation of one breed to the other in numerical importance

Farmers will continue to breed the big greys and blacks Up to date 196 416 Percherons have been recorded in the United States and there are 20 000 breeders in the country Thoughtful men realize that no machine yet invented can replace the Percheron the French front were grade Percherons. In 1016 team in economy durability and dependability

The Duroc Jersey Pig

By G G LUTHY Secretary National Duroc Record Association Peor a Illinois U.S.A

The superiority of the pure bred Duroc Jersey pigs from a utility standpoint is due principally to the following reasons 1 Economical production

2 Due to their uniformity they dress out better than scrubs

3 They naturally appeal to the packer who will pay premiums for hogs of uniform type

4 Considerably less time is required for a pure bred Duroc Jersey pig to reach a marketable

Accurate statistics compiled by authoritative d s nterested sources proved that in 1018 the Duroc Jersey sow produced 51% of all the pork marketed I in the United States thereby making the Duroc sow and her off spring the most popular of all breeds of swine Having become the most popular it therefore naturally follows that Duroc Jerseys are the best Duroes could not have attained this universal popu larity unless there was a reason. The answer les in the fact that the Duroc Jersey sow possesses inherent qual ties and characteristics as a producer of large uniform litters coupled with the natural instinct to raise her progeny unapproached by sows of any other breed of swine That Duroc Jersey sows have supreme worth and merit from the standpoint of efficiency and usefulness in the breeding pen is attested by the fact that they have been given their universal recognition by the American farmer and feeder—the court of last resort on the value of farm animals. The Duroc-Jersey sow needs no other recommendation to make secure her claim to being the most profitable brood animal on the farm, and to stand unchallenged as the world's foremost producer of meat for human consumption

If properly fed and cared for a pure-bred Duroc lersey hog is ready for market at 6 months of age. weighing from 190 to 230 lbs. The "ton litter contests" conducted throughout the United States in 1926 illustrate this. As closely as can be ascertained there were 768 litters which weighed a ton or over in 180 days. Many of these weighed in the neighbourhood of a ton and half with the top litter weighing 5.117 lbs. The second heaviest litter was one of 17 Duroes that weighed 4,925 lbs These two litters demonstrate the possibilities of pure bred Duroc-Jersey hogs when given a chance, and they are beyond average farm conditions, but the majority of the 768 litters are not: for there was but an average of about 10 pigs per litter raised Of the 768 litters, 600 were pure-bred The Duroc-Jerseys head the list with 230 litters, followed by Poland Chinas with 151 litters, Chester Whites with 110 litters, Berkshires 34 litters, Hampshire 20 litters, Spotted Poland Chinas 23 litters, Yorkshires 12 litters and Tamworths 11 litters

The reason that more Duroc-Jerseys than any other breed won in these contests is due to the fact that the Duroc-Jersey sow possesses inherent qualities and characteristics as a producer of large, uniform litters, coupled with the natural institut to raise her pregeny, unapproached by sows of any other breed of pies

The State of Illinois during the last year produced 359 ton litters, of which 170 litters were Duroes. It has been stated that any good feeder could pick a single litter and get such results, and in 1926 the State of Nebraska conducted what is known as "The Nebraska Standard Pig Crop Contest" In Nebraska a farmer who had four or more sows was allowed to enter his herd provided the sows were breed to farrow in the field early and late.

within a period of 30 consecutive days. Of the eight herds that won in this contest five were Durocs and the first prize went to a Nebraska farmer who entered 16 pure-bred Duroc sows which farrowed 133 pigs and of these 129 reached maturity at an average weight of 1,681 lbs per liter.

At the National Swine Show of the U.S.A. held it Peoria, Illinois, in September, 1927, the largest individual animal shown was a Duroc-Jersey aged boar whose official weight was 1,040 lbs.

In the 10 classes at this Show the average official weight of Duroc-Jerseys was the largest in eight, as this table shows:

being careful mothers and heavy sucklers will always raise a satisfactory percentage of the pigs farrowed. The conformation of the Duroc sow of to-day is such as greatly lessens the possibility of the loss of very young pigs on account of clumsiness and over-laving of pigs by the dam. This is very important, as it is the number of pigs raised that counts when reckoning profit or loss in the hog business. Durocs are wonderful foragers and grazers, and make the very best possible use of all kinds of pasture. This is a very valuable asset, as it not only greatly cheapens the cost of production, but results in an abundance of exercise which is so conducive to the health of the herd and stimulates the development of bone and muscle Being active, keen and alert, Duroes are less inclined to be lazy and lie around all day, depending on the slop pail to supply every necessity the body requires, but love to be out

The Kentucky Red Pig.

By WOODS WALKER Lancaster Kentucky

Writing about 'Red Berkshires' I would emphasize the fact that unlike most new breeds of live stock, Kentucky breeders have not created this pig and then heralded it as a 'new' breed On the contrary, our pigs have been bred pure for close on 80 years, but prior to that for at least a quarter of 80 years, but prior to that for at least a quarter of a century they were bred more or less pure, if one is to accept the statements of the men who originated them New blood was brought in as it was needed to breed as near the desired, type as possible

John W Walker, Hilery Gibbs and Jack Burnside were the originators of the breed. They noticed and took a liking to the red pig while they had a good opportunity for studying the hogs. In the long securisions to the South, driving continuously and feeding as they went, the 'Red hog led the way, and to their surprise they would take on flesh faster than other types that followed lazily behind, waiting, as it were for their food to be lad before them

These facts were also noted by the Planters from whom the feed was purchased en route. Their beautiful red coats, their wonderful loins and hams, the latter coming all down to their hock joints, their wellsprung ribs and upright ears gave them a wide awake and alert appearance. The small tapering heads indicated a scarcity of cheap meat. The big bone and straight feet showed that they were able to carry flesh day after day and stand up under it. They attracted attention wherever they went, and when they became known brought more money than any other breed driven with them As a resulting fact, they became popular with those who owned and bred them When the driving over these long districts at regular intervals with live stock to the Southern markets came to an end, owing to improved transport facilities, these Kentucky men continued to breed them on their farms as they found them prolific, good rustlers and easily and quickly matured After the passing of these pioneers their descendants and neighbours kept the breed pure, and several generations since then have bred the Kentucky Red Berkshires

We who know them regard them as the most practical for all purposes on the farm While not widely known for their winnings in the Show Ring we still assert for them that under the equal treatment and conditions they will compare favourably with any other of the Show Breeds Where hogs are rated only for the market, we believe the Kentucky Red Berkshire surpasses any other breed known. The sows are good mothers kind and gentle in disposition giving plenty of rich milk to the young, probably attributable to their fondness of grass and roots

For early development we believe that the Red Berkshire is unsurpassed The pigs respond quickly to full feed and fatten at any age desired The meat of the hams of matured hogs is very desirable. It has a rich flavour, furn and fine they. The hams are in great demand as the lean meat lies on the inside with out fat streaks, and the fat meat on the outside can be trimmed close

I would further emphasize that we have only bred these hogs for show purposes since our organization in September, 1923. We then selected from our stock those individuals that conform as nearly as possible to our "Standards of Perfection". These standards are — Standards of Perfection (1997).

Head and Face—Head medium length, face nearly straight, medium length between the eyes

Ears - Medium length, thin, slightly inclined forward, or straight up

Neck —Short, well set to the shoulders, tapering from shoulders to the head

Jowl—Light and tapering from neck to point Shoulders—Deep, medium width and fullness, well in line with back

Chest — Large, deep and roomy, full girth

Rach and Lorge — Back straight or slightly arche

Back and Loins —Back straight or slightly arched, with nearly uniform thickness

Sides and Ribs - Sides full firm, ribs strong, well sprung at top and bottom

Belly and Flank -Straight and full, flanks full and running nearly on line with sides

Hams and Rump—Hams long and deep extra width rump, slightly rounded from loin to root of tail, buttock full neat and firm, devoid of flabbiness or excessive fat

Legs and Feet —Legs medium length, set well apart, squarely under body, wide above knee and hock, rounded and well muscled below Pasterns short nearly unpight toes short and firm enabling the animal to carry its weight with ease

Tail -Medium length, slightly curled

Colour -Red

Size—Boars, two years and over, 750, or over, sow same age 600, or over, eighteen months boar, 550, sow, 550, twelve months boar or sow, 400, six months both sexes 200

NEW IDEA MANURE SPREADER

For the distribution of all types of barnyard or stable manure

Durably built—frame work of steel—entire machine riveted throughout—strong efficient and requires few repairs Guaranteed for one year against breakage

The life-time spreader Reduces manure to fine fragments and spreads it smoothly from 7 to 10 feet in width. Feed ranges 4 & 12, 16 and 20 loads per acre. Two horses handle average load with case. Weight about 1,500 pounds

The original "wide-spreading' spreader Manufactured and sold for 30 years and successfully used by leading breeders throughout the world

W He for catalogs and special introductory after for foreign countries

THE NEW IDEA SPREADER COMPANY
Factory—COLDWATER, OHIO, U.S.A.

SPRINGFIELD, ILLINOIS.

SAINT VINCENT Twenty five miles south of Saint Lucia is the island of St Vincent with an area of 132 square miles one of the most fertile in the Windward Island Group where the principal products are sugar rum cocoa and spices. More than one sixth of the total area is under cultivation and the soil is highly productive. Although the climate is exceed ingly humid with an annual rain fall of nearly 80 inches it is by no means unhealthy. The island has a local government assisted by a legislative Council The Covernment have maintained an Experiment Live Stock Breeding Station to which from time to time Pedigree and stud animals have been imported Experiments have been carried on since the year 1902 chiefly for the purpose of encouraging better breeding methods and the local interest in breeding from Pedigree stres and dams Thus Thoroughbred stallions have been imported and placed at the service of farmers and the breeding of dairy cattle has been encouraged through the importation of Ayrshire and Holstein Friesian bulls and heifers. As regards pig breeding besides Poland China stud animals from the United States Berkshire and Large Black pigs have been imported from England and proved most useful These imported animals have according to the Colonial Secretary left their mark on the aminals The imported Zebu bulls have proved in the island emmently suitable for crossing on the native cattle and several fine herds can now be seen on the north coast In the little island of Mustique where all the native cattle have been crossed with Zebu bulls some remarkably fine cross breds have resulted Speaking generally the native cattle have turned out suitable material for crossing purposes and probably Saint Vincent would prove a likely place for Pedigree live stock breeding with an abundance of beautiful pastures a chinate suitable for breeding and great interest shown among breeders for improvement of herds and flocks There is however a considerable amount of work to be done before the farmers can be persuaded to abstain from breed ng off scrub animals Pig breeding is a well paying proposition. Regarding sheep breeding there is a number of considerable flocks but the sheep are on the whole somewhat small sized although very hardy and thoroughly acclimatised Grat I reeding is much in vogue and the size of the

ils seems to be larger in this island than in a number ther West Indian islands

GRENADA This island belongs to the Windward Croup and is one of the most beautiful of all the West Indian islands with splendid soil suitable for all kinds of tropical plants. Spices grown here attain a flavour almost unique. The chief fown St. George is the seat of the government while other towns are St. David Charlotte Granville and Sauteurs. The island was discovered by Columbus in the year 1498.

From the live stock breeding point of view there is a field for enterprising men especially with regard to pig and sheep breeding. The Lave Stock Depart ment states that pigs are doing extremely well in the island where the breeders besides for local consumption are breeding for the requirements of Trinidad. The number of pure bred boars seems limited but there is a general grading up attempt the native pigs being crossed with Berkshure and Large Black boars. Towards the end of 1926 a rather severe outbreak of swine fever ravaged in the Parishes of St. Patrick and St. Andrew.

As regards the breeding of sheep this is a remunerative industry and breeders are chiefly catering for the Trinidad market. Several breeders have imported a number of Southdown rams from the United States to grade up their flocks and the improvement is marked Duting the last few years no imports of sheep from British South Africa have taken place but before the war wool less sheep were imported from Africa and proved a suitable breed for Grenada. Gost breeding is well to the fore and the Government contemplate importing Saanen bucks for the crossing of native deas.

The results from Thoroughbred horse breeding in the island are stated to be satisfactor, several stallions having been imported recently. The local Race Club contemplates the importation of a number of Thoroughbreds with a view of stimulating racing and horse headers.

and horse breeding
SAINT LUCIA
The commercial importance of this beautiful island came to an end with the con struction of the Panama Canal and its value as a coaling station once upon a time considerable has likewise disappeared. On the other hand the island promises well to become a live stock breeding centre of some importance but not before the Government have succeeded in attracting settlers to the Crown lands which still lie almost unused as they have done for many years waiting for the would be purchaser.

It is coroous that this attractive island with its many advantages has been perfected up to now by live stock men seeing that local conditions for a prosperous live stock industry are favourable. The island belongs to the Windward group, lying between Martinique and St Vincent It is a volcanic island with the greater part covered by dense forests where the valleys are well cultivated and extraordinarily productive in coffee of a magnificent quality. There are large stretches of land which can be purchased on easy payment from 10s to 20s an acre and besides coffee bananas limes and other tromcal fruits grow luxuriantly and can be seld at good prices to the fruit shipping companies Capital investment by the smaller stock breeders should prove a good speculation

Exactly three hundred years ago this island was given away by King Charles I to one of his favourites who however, being insolvent could not effect colonisa tion In the year 1605 the good ship Olive Blossom landed a handful of settlers who fared hadly when they discovered that the King of France claimed the island In the year 1635 he actually gave away the island to some of his courtiers and these in 1642 transferred their rights to the French West India Company in turn sold St. Lucia Grenada and Martinique for the cash sum of £1 600 to a group of adventurers since when St Lucia was alternatively in French and English possession until in 1782 Admiral Rodney captured the island from the French After that date it has been a British colony. The island is 28 miles long and 15 miles broad and as stated of wonderful fertility. As a tourist attraction the island is certainly worth attention LEEWARD ISLANDS The first white man to discover these islands Christopher Columbus sighted them early in the morning on the 3rd November 1493 a discovery that opened a romantic at times very bloody history of early colonisation. To day these islands are prosperous and although their agricultural and commercial activities for geographical reasons are limited it would probably be correct to state that live stock breeding in the future may play a considerable part in their further development. The name of this island group has been used by geographers from time to time During the period of sugar cane prosperity great riches accumulated most of which however, in later years was lost when the sugar cane was cultivated in so many other countries. The emancipation of the slaves was likewise a loss to the islands However some of these islands have always enjoyed a quiet prosperity

The island of ANTIGUA is about 70 miles in cir cumference with an area of 108 square miles and a total acreage of about 70 000 acres
The chief articles of export are sugar and cotton
The soil is very diverse in character and the most fertile lands have a lower strata of limestone and clay

The island of ST CHRISTOPHER with an area of 68 square miles is very mountainous. The principal town Basse Terre is a most attractively laid-out town

The usual of Nevis has an area of so source miles and was for administrative purposes united with St Christopher in 1892 Sugar and cotton and live stock breeding are the main sources of income

ANCUILLA has an area of 35 square miles of well cultivated land divided into 506 holdings each of which is of a few acres. Once upon a time the Anguilla cotton was of the finest quality in the West Indies

DOMINICA has an area of 106 square miles and is divided into ten Parishes in each of which live stock breeding takes place The agricultural products are sugar, limes coros oranges and cocosnuts. This island with its beautiful scenery and fertile soil is the largest of all the Leeward islands and seems eminently suited for breeding of sheep and pigs soil is everywhere highly productive especially in the interior. Crown land can be acquired on reasonable terms and at fairly cheap prices

MONTSERRAT, at a distance of 25 miles from Antigua has an area of 32 square miles with the chief towns of St Anthony and Phymouth Sugar, cotton and limes are the main articles of export

The VIRGIN ISLANDS thirty two in number, include Tortola Anexada Salt Island Peter Island etc Owner to the decline in cane sugar cultivation, the Covernment long ago decided to encourage live stock breeding and an Experimental Station was established Prospenty has again returned Pedigree animals for improving the local breeds were acquired agricultural supervisers and inspectors engaged and a series of interesting experiments undertaken for the purpose of ascertaining which breeds in Europe, the United States or India might be most suitable for the local Thus a number of Indian Zebu bulls were imported from time to time and crossed with the native cattle the crosses being again crossed with the Island cattle which probably emanated from old English stock This cross breeding probably commenced in the year 1878 and may be considered as the foundation for the island's present cattle breeding industry Later on American Shorthorn bulls besides Holstein Friesian and Hereford bulls were imported for cross breeding and Suffolk cows were also utilised At the Skerrett Experimental Farm various cross breeding experiments were undertaken and again Indian cattle and Dexter bulls were imported. An inspector of animals is supervising cattle breeding English Thoroughbred and Hackney stallions have likewise been imported and undoubtedly done some good, and as regards pig breeding Berkshire boars have been utilised for grading up the island breed Undoubtedly the field for the live stock man in the Leeward islands is not unimportant and as the number of privately owned agricultural estates on which live stock breeding is taking place is considerable systematic propaganda by breeders of Pedigree livestock in the Continents of Europe Australasia and America should open up trade possibilities. The following list contains the names and addresses of the principal agricultural and stock breeding estates

for many years worked hard and patiently towards developing the live stock industry in the island This is developing, and the interest shown among the farmers for improved breeds and better methods in breeding cannot fail to slowly penetrate so that the present breeding off the "scrub' may soon be a thing of the past Pedigree stud animals have been purchased from Great Britain during the last thirty years, or so, and under the auspices of the Colonial Department of Agriculture, a Government Stock Farm was established some years ago where a number of different cattle breeds as well as horses have been tried, in some instances with very conspicuous success, while in other instances one or two breeds have proved entirely unsuitable for the climate of the island Successfully Jerseys and Guernseys, Ayrshires Red Polls and Aberdeen-Angus cattle have been bred, and several foreign cattle breeds, especially the Brown Swiss, seem to be in favour Since the Government made dipping obligatory and inaugurated dipping tanks in several places, commencing at Grove Place, Mile Gully, much less sickness prevails but the problem of immunising European breeds is, of course, one of certain magnitude On the average farms indiscriminate breeding is, unfortunately, still the rule as owing to the local demand for meat it is here rather a question of fattening butchers' beasts than breeding from stud animals

The Department of Agriculture established a few vears ago a Stud breeding farm in the Manchester district, at an elevation of 1,550 ft, with an area of 3 362 acres where a number of excellent stallions bulls, etc., are kept for service to the farmers Thus Hereford, Sussex, Devon, Aberdeen-Angus and Red Poll bulls have contributed to grading up the native cattle, and Indian bulls of the Zebu and the Hissar breeds have also been stationed here It is probable that the grading-up movement can be best promoted through the use of Indian bulls as their progeny seems more immune against contagious diseases There is a great number of cattle farms in Jamaica, here called Pens and the live stock is probably now developing on more satisfactory lines According to the latest census, the cattle stock reached nearly

The Jamaica Agricultural Society, Kingston, has at 26,000 Pig breeding, which curiously enough is not rapidly developing, and sheep breeding, are numerically represented by small numbers, 1 e , 35 000 pigs and some 6,000 sheep The climate of Jamaica should certainly permit of a profitable live stock industry, but as regards cattle, it is admitted that the best crosses are obtained through the assistance of Indian stock, and more rapid development on the individual farms is to be seen where the cross bred stock is kept. The valuable Pedigree strains require some generations before their blood becomes immune against cattle diseases, and in this respect, the same experience has been made in other parts of the West Indies

The area of Jamaica is about 4,400 so miles, of which 880,000 acres are stated to be under timber and rumate, and I III,000 acres cultivated. The cultivated land is officially termed grazing lands comprising some 834,000 acres, and 47,000 acres are tillage land Among the various crops coffee is the most important, being cultivated on about 18,000 acres Bananas have been cultivated for several years on a much larger area, officially estimated at 80,000 acres, but undoubtedly a great portion of this acreage is slowly going out of banana cultivation other tropical fruits instead coming in vogue Cocoanut palm trees are planted over nearly 40 000 acres, yielding a constant source of income Cocoa is lately cultivated on about 8 000 acres Other agricultural crops are ginger, arrowroot, cassava, rice, oranges and nutmeg, besides corn and canes

There are several hundred grazing farms where 100 head or more of cattle are bred or maintained The greatest number of these cattle farms 15 in the parishes of St Mary, St Anne, and West Morland, but there is a number of large farms under grass in the parishes of St Katherine, St Elizabeth, St Andrew, and Manchester The average head of cattle seems to be 400-500, but on many a farm 1,500 to 2 500 head of cattle are kept Breeding and feeding of live stock has always been and remains the mainstay of agriculture, and when science can clearly point the way towards immunising the various categories of domestic animals, Jamaica with its large population cannot fail to develop towards becoming, in this part 150 000 head, while the horse stock was estimated of the world, a factor in the production of dairy food

Livestock Breeding in Trinidad and Tobago.

The Breeding of Pedigree stock is carried out solely at the Government Farms—one in Trinidad and the other in Tobago The large Sugar Plantations only breed grade stock and their breeding is principally for working purposes. The types of animals used are Zebu cattle chiefly of the Nellor or Guzerati type and the Water Builfalces.

Horses At the Government stock farms

HORESS At the Government stock farms Thoroughbred stallnons are kept standing for service in different parts of the Colony Their progeny are chiefly used for Raeing purposes and for hacks on sugar plantations. The fees charged for services are £3 to £4. Some of these stallnons are bred to imported Thoroughbred mares and their progeny are at times good enough to race in the same classes as imported.

The stallons on the farms at present are four in number—Golden Eaglet Marat Quickmatch and Nelsweep The latest importation is Golden Eaglet who was recently landed in the Colony from England at a cost of £300 He was a winner in England.

DONKEYS Four donkey stallions are maintained for mule and donkey breeding. The larger Jacks are imported from the USA (Kentucky) and the smaller ones from the neighbouring Island of Barbados. For mule breeding the Government charge a fee of £1 to £1 to sand for Donkey breeding a fee of £1 to £1 to sand for Donkey breeding a fee of £1.

CATTLE The Colony is not interested in beef cattle as being near to the natural Savannahs of the mainland of South America. The Island imports 1,000 head of beef cattle from Venezuela every month, and they are sold, after paying all expenses at a price of 24d—34 per lb. live weight

Breeding is therefore confined to two types of animals—dairy cattle and draught cattle

At the Government farm in Trinidad a dairy is run for the purpose of supplying milk to the Government Institutions—as a matter of fact the farm was really started as a dairy about 50 years ago and its functions were later increased to cover that of the 1 provement of live stock in the Colony

The dairy herd is chiefly composed of Grade Friesians In the past different kinds of dairy bulls were imported but as the best results were obtained from Friesians only this type of bull is now used The best milk yield is 60 lbs per day from a highly graded Friesian and there are several others of the same type which give 50 lbs when fresh

There are at present 4 pure bred Friesian bulls on the farms and another is standing for service in an out district. The pastures throughout the Colony are chiefly the property of the Government and the farm supplies highly graded Friesian bulls for service In a short time it is hoped to be able to provide pure bred bulls for the fees charged for services $3.60 for

Pedigree bulls and $1 00 for grade bulls

A pure bred herd of Zebu cattle chiefly of the Nellor strain originally imported from the Hissar farm These animals in India is also kept on the farms are bred chiefly for working purposes and the purebred bulls at 4 years of age are sold for £80 £100 to the large Sugar Plantations which use them to grade up their working stock

The herd in Trinidad is the best in the West Indie. and a considerable trade is done with all the Islands selling bulls to such important Sugar Islands as Cuba Barbados Antiqua Guadeloupe and Martinique Some of the Pedigree stock is sold to Venezuela On some of the Sugar Plantations Bulfalo herds are kept and stock bred for working purposes

The farms breed the following types of Berkshire Large Blacks and Blue pure bred pigs Tamworths Middle whites and Poland China have been tried but as the results obtained were not encouraging these breeds are no longer used The

the pure bred pigs are sold very quickly at 6 8 weeks old for £1 5s At the annual sale at the farm about 30 40 lots of pure bred pigs are sold, and in this way the Pedigree stock is scattered for breeding purposes throughout the Colony

SHEEP AND GOATS -Very little sheep breeding is carried out in this Colony while in the Island of Tobago sheep are bred chiefly African sheep crossed with Hampshire Downs or Dorset sheep Sheep do much better in the Windward Islands, and Trinidad depends on these islands for mutton Goats of the Swiss type Saanen and Toggenburg are fairly common in the Island The Government has several Saanen bucks standing for service throughout the Colony and everything is done to encourage the peasants to improve the dairy strain of the native goats. A herd of Saanen goats original stock from Switzerland is on the live stock strength of the farm in Trinidad and goatlings (both bucks and does) are offered for sale

The best yield for a goat is 12 lbs per day but up to 16 lbs have been obtained from Saanen goats in the Colony

GENERAL REMARKS - The Pedigree stock is chiefly imported from Canada and the United States of America, owing to the fact that restrictions governing the importation of animals from the British Isles are very severe on account of Foot and Mouth Disease

The most dangerous disease affecting imported Red Water fever (Boune Piroplasmosis) In order to overcome the high death rate young stock which are as a rule highly resistant are imported and become naturally immunized

It is of interest to note that although the Stock farm in Trinidad has so many duties of a public nature to Berkshires and Large Blacks do extremely well and perform its Revenue exceeds its Expenditure

Livestock Breeding in Cuba

The latest Live Stock census in Cuba estimates the number of cattle at 4 514 000 horses at 685 000 but sheep and pigs have not been counted for several years

During the last ten years the Island farmers interest in live stock has increased and the animals exhit ted at local Fairs bear good evidence to the opinion held in the United States that Cuba will soon rank as an important I reeder of agricultural stock. Where prominent stud animals have been acquired either for pure breeding or crossing with the local native stock such animals have been chiefly drawn from the United States. The total area is about 44 000 square miles

Since the island became an independent Republic and American influence made itself felt improvements in every direction are noticeable and as a live stock raiser and sugar cane producer Cuba has probably an important future to look forward to The climate is of course very hot and the annual rain fall varies from 40 to 160 inches. The forests of Cuba are magnifi-cently luxuriant with an abundance of valuable timber. rice and corn are the chief crops but cotton cocoa and will be the coast line is nearly 2000 miles in length | ind go sugar tobacco and coffee are largely cultivated

The Cultanese farms are as a rule well manared, and the soil is well prepared; and as a very considerable portion of the island is entirely devoted to cattle breeding which seems, judging from the progress made, a paying proposition, it is very likely that Cuba offers good opportunities for breeders of Pedigree stud animals. In the Provinces of Santa Clara and Matanzas the sugar cane cultivation is magnificent, and while sugar is to-day the chief source of income to the agriculturist. tobacco is, of course, the reliable mainstax of the country, commercially areaking. The scat of Govern- testify to an awakening interest in the live stock industry.

ment is at Havana, and the island is divided into six Provinces-Santa Clara, Santiago, Pinar del Rio, Puerto Principe, Havana and Matansas, in all of which live stock breeding is given attention. The chief complaint about this Island is the bad roads. In several Provinces magnificent horses are bred, and that the Culanese farmer has an eye for live stock breeding was recently demonstrated at a Live Stock Show at Havana where several very good bulls and cows were exhibited. The following list of breeders of Pedigree stock

Livestock Breeding in Guadeloupe.

The Live Stock estimate for Guadeloupe states

This French Colony seems to develop its Live by a Parliamentary Representative for Guadeloupe Stock Industry, as was evident at a recently held agricultural Show at Basse-Terre, June, 1927, when be made a paying proposition in the Colony because the remarkable strides in agriculture and live stock breeding during the last twenty-three years were dreds of years could be made to pay for their keep, evident, as during the interval no Show had been held. It was only a question of "immunising" European Excellent horses were exhibited, besides mules and asses. and in the class for cattle some very interesting exhibits demonstrated the results from crossing the "Creole," or native, breed with French bulls. The number of first-rate dairy cattle exhibited with statements concerning their performance and milk-fat testify to systematic attempts of grading-up the live stock industry to a well paying proposition. Some well bred pigs of the French Craonnaise breed likewise testified to the possibility of breeding pigs in spite of the tropical climate. During the last ten years the average milk production, owing to improvements through cross breeding, has been brought up to 10 litres from a previous 41 to 5 litres. Thus this exhibition illustrated the success with which the French Administration have met in their efforts to create a remunerative live stock in the French Senate that live stock breeding ought to if the Creole types which had existed there for hunstock, if imported, or otherwise achieving results through cross-breeding. The live stock is, of course, not considerable in numbers, but there is no reason why the Creole types should not be entirely dispensed with.

The soil is very fertile all over the islands, well cultivated, and the yield in agricultural products such as sugar, coffee, cocoa, bananas, etc., on a fairly satisfactory level. The colony, since 1814 in the possession of France, has sometimes been an English possession. lest by France and retaken. It consists of two distinct islands only separated by a narrow strip of water-the Salee River, these two different parts being known as Basse-Terre and Grande-Terre. Both these islands are traversed by numerous small rivers which, however, dry up during the summer. As means of communications, an excellent system of roads run all over industry in the West Indies Long ago it was stated country in which the number of small but

Livestock Breeding in The Falkland Islands.

This group of Islands lies about 300 miles east of i the Straits of Magellan and consists of 93 small islands. while the East and West, where live stock breeding is carried on comprise an area of about 3,150 square miles The Islands have passed through many viewssitudes, having in turn belonged to England, France and Spain during various periods, and Argentina once upon a time claimed the possession. In 1833 the Islands however, again came under the sovereignty of Great Britain, then for the purpose of protecting the Whale fishery. The population is British and their chief occupation sheep raising. The total grazing area covers probably some three million square miles scil is mostly of a boggy nature where only very coarse grasses grow, however very nourishing for cattle The climate is very healthy It is a wind swept country, yearly rainfall of about 30 inches

The main occupation, as stated, is sheep raising While it is officially stated that the sheep carrying capacity of the land is gradually reduced, overstocking is nevertheless the chief complaint of the local Govern ment who strongly advocate reduction of the number of sheep in the various flocks, and the erection of more sub divisional fences on all sheep stations, as being the only possible means of improving the present condition of the land It is also complained that too many useless old sheep are carned, producing very little wool and not paying for their keep while they deprive more profitable sheep of a good deal of food. The overstocking is chiefly in the West Falklands, but it is hoped that through proper weeding out of the useless animals, the quantity of grass available for highly producing flocks may improve Most of the farmers pay their chief consideration to the quantity of wool produced at the stations and, of course, this leads to over-stocking Sheep are imported for breeding from time to time from the United Kingdom as well as from New Zealand The Chief Inspector of Stock is advising the farmers to pay more attention to the importance of acquiring Pedigree breed animals, while his chief complaint is that breeders are not providing their imported sheep with sufficient food and shelter. Efforts are made to encourage the growing of valuable stock foodcrops, such as turnips, oats, hay, etc, and experiments during the last few years have sufficiently proved that the soil is capable of growing very good crops if only better methods could be adopted in preparing it As regards cattle, the stock is increasing and milk production is given more attention. At the Covernment Experimental Farm horse breeding is being encouraged Clydesdale stallions having lately been imported. The number of stallions is now 28 and of brood mares about 300 The total number of sheep is about 615 000

Livestock Breeding in Argentina

According to the latest census the present Line Stock in Argentina comprise cattle 37 105 000 sheep 36.205 000 pigs 1.445 000 horses 9.395 000

In the forefront among the world's pastoral countries Argentina during several decades has bred excellent acricultural stock and the Argentinian live stock man ranks to-day among the most skilled breeders Argentina has for many years bred better animals than has been the case in many other countries and the Argentinian breeders have paid the highest prices for British Pedigree strains Probably in no other country was the value of recorded Pedigrees early so highly appreciated as in Argentina and the result is that to-day the value of the Studs Flocks and Herds in the Republic represents stupendous sums of money The native stock has been improved to a degree scarcely imagined some twenty five years ago and the badly shaped small sized and coarse grained native cattle and sheep have disappeared the bulk of the cattle sheep and pigs now bearing the stamp of British breeds

Among the best known breeds in Argentina the Shorthorns the Herefords and the Aberdeen Angus should be specially mentioned the existing herds having been entirely built up from imported sires and doms Among Dairy cattle the Swiss Simmental and Frabourg the Island Jersey and Guernsey breeds the French and Belgian cattle and Dutch Friesians are now highly appreciated in the country and bred at a degree of perfection which reflects the greatest credit to the Argentinan breeders

As regards horses Percheron horses Shires and Clydesdales are much in favour and to day bred in Argentina true to type and character As for sheep Rambouillets Tasmanian and Saxony and Negretti Merinos are bred in many parts of Argentina and as for Down Sheep Oxford and Hampshire Downs and Shropshires are greatly in vogue and bred with the same success as in the original homeland of these breeds The Romney Marsh sheep in Argentina are almost perfect as this breed has been acclimatised in a remark able degree As for Great Britain's Long Woolled sheep the Lincoln sheep are to day highly cherished all over the Republic and have here developed finer bone and wool than the breed ever obtained in its own homeland

As regards pig breeding the American Duroc Jersey is probably the most popular of all existing types in Argentina but the Vorshire pig is coming to the forefront together with the British black coloured breeds such as the Large Black and the Berkshire Curjously enough there is little or no demand for the Tamworth pies

The Argentina Rural Society— Sociedad Rural Argentina—one of the most virile and up-to-date Associations of Breeders in the whole world is the organiser and owner of all existing Stud Books in Argentina. In the year 1888 the Argentinian Short horn Herd Book was founded and later sold to the Society which have continued it year after year steadily increasing entries which now exceed 100 000 in number. The Hereford cattle are also organised with a Herd Book, and lately the Aberdeen Angus has been placed in the same position.

The Sociedal Rural Argentina whose offices are at Buenos Ayres Flortida 400 supervises the breeding and entires of Pedigrees in accordance with strict rules and regulations for the various breeds and the Society thus controls the following Stud Registers

Herd Book Argentina comprises Shorthorn and Polled Shorthorn cattle Hereford Devon West Highland Sussex and Aberdeen Angus breeds the French Charrollaise and Normandy breeds and the Holando Argentina or Freisna breed

The Stud Book Argentina comprises the following Horse breeds The Argentina bred horse the French Percheron and Boulonnais the Belgaan Ardenne and the British Suffolk Shire and Clydesdale horses

The Flock Book Argentina comprises Lincoln Romney Marsh and Rambouillet Merino sheep and Shropshire Hampshire and Oxford Down sheep

The Swine Book Argentina comprises the already mentioned American and British breeds and the other Stud Books maintained by the Society are the Ass Book Argentina and a Cat and Dog Stud Book excellent in every respect, it may undoubtedly be correctly stated that for many years the country will purchase breed animals from other countries, chiefly from England and Scotland, France and U.S America There is a tendency in Argentina towards breeding the "Double Utility" type, such as the Dairy Shorthorns or Red Polled cattle, etc., and probably Germany will soon enter the field of competition with some of her best breeds sake of high prices obtainable. Great Britain ranks foremost, as of all the meat imported into Britain the bulk is imported from Argentina It is, therefore, practically certain that the Argentinian breeders will continue to acquire the very best sires obtainable with a view of constantly developing their cattle That this view is taken in Argentina is proved by the fact that the leading Estancitros are striving to breed according to the changed taste in Great Britain, and are thus to-day developing early maturity in

Livestock Breeding in Bolivia.

With the exception of sheep, the flocks of which according to the latest census in Bolivia number about 4,225 000 head, the live stock breeding industry is neglected The cattle census estimates the existing number at 2,335 000 head the pig stock at 502,000, and the number of horses at 205 000. On the other hand, in Bolivia two remarkable animals are bred by the Indians for their wool growing capacity, i.e., the Llama and the Alpaca while the Guanaco and the Vicuna are no less remarkable. It should be stated that the number of cattle roaming about wild in the forests and on the high tablelands is very considerable, and European residents who from time to time have been prone to give estimates numerically hold the number to reach several hundred thousands. As a live stock breeding country Bolivia has probably a great future and certainly the country offers more advantages in this respect than either Paraguay, Chile or Peru, where live stock breeding is now developing on quite satisfactory lines Owing to its geographical position Bolivia has always experienced great difficulties in developing and expanding her resources but it is to be hoped that the friendly arrangement with her neighbours recently brought about, may result in increased exports of minerals and thereby permit the country to pay more attention to the need of State assistance to the farming community As a producer of tin, Bolivia is probably without any rival quantitively speaking, and the silver mines at Potosi and Oruro have brought riches to the country, but a country without a natural sea board is always handicapped and Bolivia has in the past been suffering from lack of settlers owing to this circum stance As uncultivated land is ludicrously cheap, and may be found very valuable owing to the large herds of cattle roaming about which might be hemmed in, it is likely that in years to come cattle ranching in connection with a refrigeration industry may draw many settlers to the country as has been the case in Madagascar and elsewhere where the settler had the double advantage of obtaining land for next to nothing besides grazing stock. It is often overlooked that Bolivia is a country of very great dimensions, as the area holds more than 250 000 square miles, but with a population of scarcely more than two million people, unable to explore the country's resources owing to its numerical inferiority. Probably more than 300 000 are Indians still living an uncivilised life

The soil is generally fertile, the climate healthy and the land well watered through several big rivers such as the Mamore the Beni and the Madre-de-Dios In the Bolivian Tableland, some 10 500 feet above sea level the air is remarkably pure and dry, but frost district magnificent crops are harvested year after year, and tropical as well as temperate fruit grow Tea, cocoa, coffee and bamboo here in abundance represent the indigenous plants, but many other valuable plants such as the sarsaparilla, rubber, balsam. and vanilla grow in many parts of the country On the grazing plains-Campos-where the half-wild cattle love to roam about, these often attain good size and sometimes can be easily fattened. Here is a country par preference for the live stock breeder who could commence a profitable occupation without much

An American live stock expert who recently investigated agricultural and live stock conditions in Bolivia reported to his Government that the 'greatest need in the country at present is the introduction of better breeding animals from abroad." The best district for would be settlers, where stock breeding would meet with the greatest possible degree of success, is undoubtedly the Yacuma region southwards to the Chaco lowlands, along the Pilcomayo river. The districts where cattle breeding has proved most profitable are the Provinces of Campero, Totora, Ayopaya, Santa Cruz, Tarija, and also in the Gran Chaco and Aviles As for sheep breeding, probably the depart-ments of Totora Gran Chaco, Cinte and Tomina are most suitable. Here sheep certainly attain good sizes and develop their wool capacities. The Government Department for Live Stock Breeding advise settlers taking up breeding and farming that the Province of Azero is the most suitable, and be that as it may, certainly the live stock is larger here than in any other Province

As for the origin of the existing indigenous cattle breed in Bolivia, it is undoubtedly the descendant of the old Spanish stock originally imported from the southern Provinces of Spain Through lack of care, and of course through unhampered inbreeding, year after year, these cattle have deteriorated to such an extent that a well fattened steer of good type and size seldom reaches a weight of more than 400 lbs In appearance they are long-legged, with sunk backs. developing enormous horns, skinny and unkempt, and from these cattle the Bolivians derive their main food Unfortunately, the best part of Bolivia for live stock breeding is in the east, far away from the populous districts. In the La Paz Tableland section every farmer breeds cattle, but in insufficient numbers, and thus it happens that in spite of hundreds of thousands of cattle roaming wild in the forests and over the campos. Bolivia is always insufficiently provided with meat. The best pastures are in the Province of securs every night of the year. Here is simply a Carangas in the fertile valleys along the Poopo river, wenderful land for live-stock breeding. In the Yungas, However, during the dry months of the year even here

the grass dries up and the question of feeding the estile becomes serious. In the Cochabamba region probably the best attention is paid to cattle breeding . but as even here insufficient alfalfa or other forage crops are cultivated, few individual live stock owners possess larger grazing herds than from 300 to 400 As a general statement it should be remarked that all the cattle bred in a local district are consumed there. so that very little is transported to other markets In almost every town a weekly cattle market is held where fattened as well as worked-out oxen are sold Among the best regulated cattle markets, the one at Oullacollo where 600 head are weekly sold, should be mentioned. Should the number of cattle driven into a town for sale not be sold, they are driven back again to the grazing district, often 25 or more miles In the Sucre district excellent oxen are marketed

On the Morjos plains, in the Bolivian Ammazone district, there are very vast, for the purpose splendidly adaptable, lands for raising of cattle on a large scale. where the grasses grow luxuriantly and the water supply is plentiful all through the year. In this district the cattle stock is estimated at between 800 000 and 1.200 000, and it should be remarked that the live stock census does not touch this district. The cattle stock is of the Criollo type, of very little value for fattening purposes. Here in this district a number of wild cattle exist, generally called 'Ganado Bravo grazing on the fringe of the prairies, but chiefly in the forests into which they escape when pursued According to the laws of Bolivia, these cattle are no man's property, but become the possession at any time of him who can catch them They often graze in

herds of from 5000 to 7,000 head
As regards sheep breeding, probably the existing hreed is a deteriorated Merino sheep, originally imported by the Spaniards when they conquered and settled in the country. The Indian sheep owners give little or no attention to their flocks which often comprise as many as 10,000 head. La Paz is the chief sheep breeding district in Bolivia with ample pasturage and water supplies, and where probably twenty times as many sheep could be maintained as now exist. More than one observing traveller has been known to remark that it is simply amazing that the Government are not encouraging sheep breeding in this district. The sheep here are sheared once every year, or twice in three years, the yield seldom reaching more than 2 lbs of washed wool. The shearing is carried out with a sharpened bit of glass or metal

According to a source of information stated to be reliable, the number of Linnas is estimated at 650 000 Bendes being one of the finest pack animals in the world, the Linna yields from 5 to 6 lbs of wool for which the same price is paid in Bolivia as for unwashed sheep's wool.

The number of Alpacas in Bolivia may reliably be estimated at 225,000, but it might be remarked here that the Covernment, for reasons of their own have persistently neelected taking a census of this useful animal In appearance it is similar to the Llama and the Victina although having considerably shorter legs It is chiefly in the Lake Titicaca and in the Oruro districts that the Alpacas can be found in considerable numbers. The market centre for selling their wool is at Puerto Acosta Nearly all the flocks of Almacas belong to the Indians Unlike the Peruyian breeders, the Alpaca breeders in Bolivia seem to neglect these highly useful animals. On an average a single alpaca shears as much as 10 lbs wool every second to third year. The wool is mostly black or brown, and the best prices are paid for the pure-white wool In several districts of Bolivia the Alpaca is being crossed with the Llama

In regard to pig breeding, little or nothing is being done to improve this industry although the general concensus of opinion is that Bolivia is singularly suitable for pig breeding. The reason is probably the aimmosity on the part of the Indians to rearing evil smelling animals. This explains why Argentina is the chief market for Bolivian pigs and why the consumption locally is small. Lately several larger estate owners have imported. Duroc Jersey pigs from the United States partly for pure breeding and partly for crossing on the native pig, and the results have been most excellent.

As regards horse breeding, this is another neglected industry, probably because the horse is seldom used in farm work where the ocen is preferred, and also owing to the Indian lack of interest in this animal. The army is the chief consumer of Bolivia's horse material.

With the many natural advantages in Bolivia favourable to live stock breeding with land obtainable at almost the purchasers own price and with possibilities of commencing breeding through incorporating a sufficient number of wild cattle, the Bolivian Government could undoubtedly attract many suitable settlers from other countries if attention were drawn to the opportunities

Livestock Breeding in Brazil,

According to a reliable Live Stock Census, the present stock of cattle may be estimated at 30,000 000 head, sheep at nearly 8,000 000, pigs at 19,200,000, and horses at 5,800,000

As Brazil only recently commenced organisation for bringing the breeding of her agricultural live stock into line with modern principles it is understandable that what this huge country has been doing lately in the way of breeding from Pedigree stock is not generally known, nor is it generally realised that Brazil is one of the largest countries in the world, as it embraces half of the South American Continent its area is nearly 3 219 000 square miles, and the greatest length of the country reaches 2 600 miles Geographically, Brazil may be divided into an eastern portion of plateau lands lying at an elevation of from 2600 to 3650 feet, and another portion consisting of very extensive lowlands mostly lying on a level with the Amazon and Parana water systems. These lowlands, which comprise a large portion of the Amazon River Basin, probably contain more than half of the total area of the country, and generally he 500-600 ft above the sea level Throughout Brazil the soil is of remarkable fertility, and it is questionable whether the soil in any other country of the world can be compared with the Brazilian soil. The largest forests in the world exist within the boundaries of the Republic and in luxuriance of pastures and magnificence of forests no other country compares with Brazil, while as for rivers no other country possesses such magnificent water ways and number of navigable rivers whole territory is traversed by a net-work of rivers through which, once these have been developed and brought into intercommunication, the whole of Brazil will obtain an inland water traffic system such as nowhere else on the Globe can be found With all these advantages it may be stated that Brazil some day will rank as one of the foremost of live stock breeding countries able to powerfully influence the world's meat The greater distance of the Amazon River passes through Brazil When it is borne in mind that no other river on the earth has such a flow and such a volume of water, it is conceivable that through engineering skill these huge masses of water may easily be diverted to the benefit of live stock breeding and other agricultural pursuits

The heat is of course intense, but the climate is penerally very healthy, and in the great plans of the Amazon River the heat is tempered through the prevalence of enormous foreits through the expanse of water and through the Trade-winds which stir the inverse A perpetual summer regions and the twelve month of the pear are divided into two accounts only, the dry and the writ. As for the temperature was the

Amazon district the mean temperature is nearly 82 deg : in the western portions of the Amazon Valley it sometimes rises to 105 deg , but on the other hand, in many a district such as Para which lies only I deg from the Equator, the climate is agreeable although the temperature is more often than not between 90 deg and 95 deg Now and then, although rarely, severely cold weather sets in, as was the case in 1859 when some 40 000 head of cattle perished in the State of Rio Grande do Sol The rainfall is in many places less than 20 inches, while in some portions, mainly in the Amazon Valley, it often reaches 550 to 620 inches. The forests are still entirely in the virgin state and impenetrable, and there are districts where no white man ever penetrated The most valuable timber produced in the world is to be found in these forests useful for every possible purpose. In the forests numbers of species of wild animals hunt, such as the puma the jaguar, monkeys, tapirs the anaconda the boa-constrictor and the alligator, while many lovely birds not found elsewhere, inhabit the country. The turtles and the porpoises reach astonishing sizes, and immense herds of cattle are roaming about, probably representing very large values of money Large numbers are yearly rounded up and caught by the lasso and killed for the sake of the horns or the skin as the meat has no commercial value

Value

In spite of these natural advantages, Brazil is one of the largest importers of foreign made articles of manufacture. Agriculture is, however, the chief industry, and some day its expansion will assume colosial proportions and call for the capitalists of the world who may be rehed on to invest money. Capital will be forthcoming when investments can be made without risk through political disturbances, but Brazilian statesmen have already proved themselves capable of taking a long view, and politically this country seems now on the highway leading to peaceful expansion in every direction.

The Branlan people are very mixed, consisting of the white descendants of Europeans Indians who are the real natives, cross bred people born of Indians and whites, pure negroes and mulattoes

Perhaps nearly one stuth of the total population consists of negroes whose forbears not so very long ago were slaves, as only in the year 1871 slavery was abolished water and through the Trade-winds which stir the invers. A perpetual summer regast and the twelve in which year the country was formally taken into mounts of the year are divided into two easons only, possession by the Portuguese Pedro Cabral on behalf the dry and the wet. As for the temperature, in the of the Portuguese King. The first settlement, at Rio.

de Janeiro, was founded in 1567 Then followed a period during which colonisers from Holland took possession of the country, but ultimately the Portuguese held was complete. For a short period Brazil was a monarchy, but in 1850 a Republic was declared since when no other power has disputed her rights as a sovereign State

Until quite recently the Governments of Brazil seemed content to leave the development of agriculture and live stock breeding to take its own course. and little or no organised efforts were made towards raising these industries to a higher level. However, after several members of Parliament had repeatedly brought matters of interest bearing upon farming. dairying and live stock breeding under the notice of the Government, it became evident that the first and unavoidable measure to be taken towards making the Brazilian nation self supporting was the collection of statistics and similar material A "Servico do Industria Pastoril"-or Live Stock Industry Service-was created, and the Veterinary Department of the Agricultural Ministry commenced collecting figures and facts relating to stock breeding in the Amazon Basin. where now there are more than 50,000 head of purebred dairy cattle, rapidly increasing. The questions of organising live stock breeding production of butter, and developing the milk yield in the dairy cattle were subjected to careful examination and investigations. and interesting reports were issued on the actual and possible economical development of Brazil-"Aspectos Economicos do Brazil During the years 1921-1923 at the instance of the 'Higher Council of Industry and Commerce, much informative material was collected and disseminated as a result of which special Departments were established under the Department of Agriculture to deal with such matters as the production of coffee and cocoa the exploiting of forests and the timber trade organising agricultural animal feeding, the dairy industry, the organisation of milk distribution in the towns etc. Furthermore, measures were taken to ascertain whether the indigenous cattle races in Brazil can be graded up for higher milk yield and fattening, a closer study of the valuable European and North American live stock breeds led to importations of a number of stud animals. One of the largest stock breeders in the State of Minas Geraes went to India to study her various cattle breeds and brought back numbers of Buffaloes which surprisingly rapidly acclumatized and increased. The crossing of the Bulfalo bulls on the native cows has proved most successful, and the milk yield from these crosses has increased while the fat percentage has risen

Brazil a dairy industry received a powerful impetus through Government grants of financial assistance to breeders and similarly interested people in such districts where the production of milk might be encouraged and local consumption stimulated. A great number of well-constructed dairies sprang up in various States, and the industry is continuously extending and expanding. A number of cheese factories have been organised, while during the last live years several factories for the production of condensed milk and milk-sugar have cropped up The State of Minas and several others now handle huge quantities of these dairy products. In the State of Rio de Janeiro the expansion of the dairy industry has promoted and developed better cattle breeding, and here alone are more than 650 000 milking cows Consumption here, however, as in many other States, far outstrips production

Pig breeding in Brazil to-day represents very large capital, and the consumption of pork is increasing in the towns from year to year. As regards the most suitable breeds for the hot climate of Brazil, experience has demonstrated that the white skinned pigs cannot withstand the intensive sun glare and that such black breeds as the Berkshire, the Large Black and the Poland China thrive well It is beyond doubt that Brazil is forging ahead as a pig breeder, and in a few years she will very likely outstrip all other countries in the production of pork. It is also possible that by degrees a huge bacon industry may be the logical development of a combined dairy and pig industry

As regards sheep breeding although a very hot climate is not generally conducive to successful sheep breeding such is nevertheless carried on with conspicuous success in various parts of the country, but chiefly in the State of Rio Grande do Sol, ie, in the southern part. The flocks here are increasing from year to year, as the new woollen goods industries can absorb all wool produced, and as for mutton, this seems to appeal to the Brazilian palate. The breeding of the native horse is likewise much encouraged. and Brazil's small sized but compact and extremely hardy breed is preferred to any other for any work required Thoroughbred horses for luxury use are always in demand if of British and French origin

Notes on Livestock in Brazil.

By F RUFFIER São Paulo

The third largest country in the world, with I 1.350 000 square miles of native grazing lands mostly on high plateaux, fairly temperate, herds of about 40 000 000 cattle—third largest in the world—20 000 000 pigs, 8 000 000 sheep and 6,000 000 horses, and all this without much attention or care from man are bare facts which proclaim to the world that Brazil is already in fact, and still more so potentially, one of the greatest live-stock countries

While every day one hears of Argentine beef, New Zealand lambs, Australian wool, Danish bacon, and so forth, who ever hears a mention made of Brazilian livestock products ? The reasons of this ignorance of things Brazilian in the live stock line are many, and it would take a large volume of close print to consider them all, even in a superficial way A few points, however, may with advantage be brought to the attention of British raisers

of Pedigree breeding stock

It should first of all be noted that British ignorance of Brazilian live stock activities is due in great part to the fact that the existing large herds of Brazil owe nothing, or practically nothing, to British breeds While the whole of North America is stocked with descendants of British breeds-Shorthorn, Herefords, Polled Angus Jerseys Shropshires, Southdowns, Coach horses Thoroughbreds-while the fabulous progress of the River Plate is mostly due to the now seventyyear old pioneer work of Scottish English and Irish stockmen, while Australia and New Zealand owe their fortunes to British stock breeders and raisers here in Brazil no such thing happened

Geographical and political reasons prevented it

Geographical, because Brazil is mostly an Upland 1,500-2 000 ft above sea level, limited by mountains tising sharply out of the Ocean and forming an effective barrier against easy penetration of the 'Hinterland," a condition still aggravated by the fact that, on an extensive coast line of some 5 000 miles, practically no navigable river opens out on the Atlantic, all the water courses of the country flowing at first inland to be finally deflected north or south into the Amazon or the River Plate. And the immense grazing lands of Brazil are on the whole located in the far west of the country, 1 000 miles or more from the coast, with no other means of communication but the beaten 'mule tracks in the endless wilderness. Cattle could thrive on those immense and fertile plains but under the trail them to the coast through endless virgin forest, across mile-wide rivers, in the face of great difficulties Therefore, the few cattle that were originally introduced in the early XVIth century by the Portuguese colonists. and those that drifted up from the Spanish settlements on the River Plate, bred and multiplied until they ran into the millions, of no commercial value, however, but for their skins, that were shipped down to the River These conditions prevailed until the Great War, and it was only then that the World, looking around for supplies, cast its eyes on the Brazilian herds and paid high enough prices to overcome the expenses of bringing the cattle to the seaboard

Politically also, conditions for a long time were not very favourable to British settlement. Under the old Portuguese colonial system most of the lands distributed by the Crown among its favourites were held in enormous blocks on which the foreigner could not settle, and if he did find some property he could purchase, he found himself blocked on all sides

Things are changed now, and many are the ranches and stock farms owned and managed by foreigners in Brazil But economic and climatic conditions do not change much, and the life of the stockman in these parts is not an easy one if he wishes to depart from the surrounding routine Distances are still enormous from the big open ranges to the coast markets, and transportation expenses whether afoot or by rail, losses on the way, Interstate tariffs municipal levies, Federal dues State taxes and export duties eat up much of the expected profit

Paradoxically, the extremely favourable climatic conditions of the Brazilian Hinterland are to a great extent and indirectly, adverse to improved stock raising The general climate of the central uplands of Brazil may be described as moderately hot, with an abundant rainfall, therefore most favourable to the growth of grass and to the life of stock of all kind And as a matter of fact, there are few countries where native live stock are so free of disease and so readily find, all the year round, an abundance of water Unfortunately these very conditions favour also the multi plication of pests and parasites internal and external. and the extraordinary abundance of worms (stomach and intestinal), flies gnats, mosquitoes maggots, ticks, and other parasites make things very hard, practically unendurable for imported stock. Some of these troubles can be taken care of by means of dipping vats. Some of these frightfully hot tropical climate it was impossible to and the Government of Brazil have been and are still very solicitous in granting substantial money premiums to stockmen who instal such vats on their ranches

Ticks introduce into the system of ruminant stock -cattle sheen etc -a special disease or Pyroplasmosis due to a parasite which settles in the blood and destroys the red cells. Native cattle are more or less immune but all imported stock is extremely susceptible and until recent discoveries died in the proportion of about 90 to 95 o within one or two months of landing Treatments which seem to promise a decisive victory over this until now baffling disease are however being studied and tried. These difficulties of course have somewhat disheartened stock breeders in their efforts to turn the Scrub into a better tyrie animal On the other hand Indian breeds have given to the offspring of crosses remarkable qualities of quick growth hardiness and resistance to practically all diseases Complaints however arose from packing plants of a difference of type in the beef so produced from the standards accepted on most markets

The final solution seems to be in the now exten sively practised habit in Southwestern Texas in the United States i.e. to breed for type to good European breeds and inject occasionally a small dose of Indian blood for stamina. In this way the stockman derives all the benefit so in hardiness and resistance of the Indian blood and the butcher all the advantages of heavy well balance dereases of high multiy meet and very small believe to the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the stockman derives and the sto

It will be seen then that in an immense country of mild climate generous pastures and abundant water boasting a natural and mostly unimproved herd of some 40 000 000 cattle there is room for British breeds to come to the fore and contribute to the general improvement of this immense chattle

Caution however must be exercised fine breeds must be submitted to a previous treatment against certain tropical diseases and intelligent blending of breeds must be resorted to in order to obtain maximum hardiness and res stance to certain local adverse cir

Also the importation of breeds into Brazil must not be ind scriminate Experience has proved that with the exception of the rather cool regions of the extreme South Durham cattle do not fare well in Brazil Black coated cattle (Aberdeen Angus) seem to be especially relished by external pests particularly ticks and blow worms Long or curly haired cattle suffer the same annoyance and none but sleek short haired animals should be sent the best colours being light reds and duns Herefords and Devons are perhaps the best British beef breeds for Brazil but in the case of the Herefords special attention must be paid to choosing only animals with ringed eyes i.e. having a substantial ring of dark pigment round the eyes. In all animals not so protected against the powerful sun rays inflammation sets in canker develops and the animal goes blind

There are many other points of great importance to be considered—most suitable age for the stock to come to Brazil best time of the year in which to ship etc which it would take too long to go into here but which show that any attempt at opening a regular market in Brazil must not be left to haphazard methods but must rely upon well planned and practical organizations

There is a good market for Pedigree dairy cattle and shey are generally kept in barns or at any rate given some sort of care their introduction is not fraught with the same compilications as that of the range cattle. The great bulk of such importation is of Daviers Friesian cattle. There are also several amateurs of

Some vears ago there was a big boost up in the pig rasing business promoted mostly by the packing plants. There resulted a rather active importation of improved breeding stock mostly Duroc Jersey. Poland Chira and Large Blacks. With the exception of the latter no British breed seems to have made any headway in Brazil. No white breed anyhow should be sent to this country their unprotected skin being unable to resist the powerful tropical sun. Tamworths are too lean for the Brazil an taste. Berkshires could do well if properly pushed. It must be said that the Brazilian market demands pigs carrying lots of pure lard not intermingled with meat as is required for bacon British breeds as a rule do not answer this requisite.

Sheep as a business are raised only in the extreme southern State of Rio Grande do Sul The breeds most in favour are the Romney Marsh the Lincoln and the Black faces especially Oxfords and Shrop shires Most of the high qual ty breeding stock imported into those parts comes across the border from Ur g ay where sheep raising has reached a high degree of perfection

Draught horses are not used to any extent in Brazil all hauling being done by mules or by motor For fancy rid ng (not much practiced outside Rio de Janeiro and Sao Paulo) cross breds descending from race horses are generally used For service the small but extremely tough native horse is admittedly satis factory. The only imports of horses that amount to anything are Thoroughbred race horses. They must be of either British or French origin. There is also a good demand for Thoroughbred files for breeding purposes.

Livestock Breeding in Chile.

The last Live Stock Census estimates the live stock at 1 998 900 head of cattle, 4 602 990 sheep, 265 900 pigs, and 328,000 horses

In this country every possible variety of climate is I found, from tropical heat in the perpetually rainless region of Atacama to the perpetual winter in the south at Cape Horn There are mountains towering far shove the snowline, and there are valleys where the tropical heat is sometimes unbearable. In parts the climate is excessively wet, while in other parts exces sively dry In the central valley where the temperature rarely rises above 76-78 deg and never falls below the freezing point, the climate is beautiful and live stock rearing is here expanding from year to year Chiefly in the north where crops of Alfalfa are abundant, live stock rearing is a highly paying occupation and stock is exported to other parts of the country and abroad. It is a curious fact about Chile that there are no fish in the rivers and no venomous reptiles are anywhere to be found. The country is immensely rich in minerals While Chile to day is one of the most prosperous of all the South American countries it is certainly also one of the most favoured in regard to natural resources The Chileans are very enterprising highly intelligent, constantly developing their country and its resources and as for live stock breeding it is probable that it may become one of the largest sheep mentioned raising countries on the South American continent Railway construction is constantly extended for the good of live stock raising which, with agriculture, are the main pursuits of the people. The population consists of the dominant class of pure Spanish descent, and of Indians and the Mestizos In one respect Chile is remarkable-for its many daily and weekly newspapers, such being published in great numbers in every town In the southern part of Chile the population consists of Araucanian Indians, one of the most interesting races on the American continent remarkable for their time honoured hospitality, courtesy, and humanity shown towards enemies when vanguished These Indians are considered to be excellent agriculturists and successful live stock breeders district inhabited by this remarkable race is comprised of the Provinces of Arauco and Valdivia stretch ing between the Andes mountains and the Pacific Ocean through which the river Biobio runs The fertility of the soil is very great and all the live stock reared here is of remarkable size and good qualities Among the indigenous live stock of Chile, the vicuna and the guanaco should be specially

Livestock Breeding in Colombia.

The Live Stock estimate for Colombia states cattle 6 505 000, sheep 810 000, pigs 1 410 000, harses 985 000

In this beautiful a inbaked country occupying the | perous live stock industry exist but have scarcely yet porth western most pos tion of the South American been observed by live stock men. Only lately have continent natural conditions favourable for a pros- serious attempts been made to improve the existing indigenous stock, chiefly on the part of American stock men and without exaggeration it might be stated that within the next ten to liften years Colombia will follow the example set by Argentina and Uruguay in regard to developing the live stock industry through improved methods in breeding

The Republic is divided into eight very large Departments-Antioquia Bolivár Boyaca Cundinamarca Magdalena Santander and Tolima The population is now nearly 6 600 000 of which a number are Indians As regards the nature of the land a great part consists of squannas and the other parts of highlands and plateau land in the central and western parts. The country is traversed by large rivers chief among which is the Magdalena river the Cauca river and the Atrato Commercially and geographically the Magdalena river is the most important as it winds its way over 1 000 miles and is navigable for nearly 840 miles Colombia is singularly devoid of lakes a circumstance that probably has much to do with the climate. This is variable according to the elevation While the lowland and coastal regions are very hot the temperature in the plateau land is salubrious and very pleasant The mineral resources of the country pro bably not yet adequately tapped are estimated to be enormous and the forests hold an abundance of valuable timber Coffee sugar cane bananas bamboo balsam wheat maize and barley constitute the main crops while rice cotton and indigo grow abundantly far only a very small portion of the country has been cultivated The forests abound in wild animals The railway construction has so far not amounted to very much but several plans are afoot for extending the existing main lines Trade with foreign countries is chiefly carried on at Santa Marta Sab nilla Cartagena Barranguilla and Buena Ventura increasing every year in volume and value. White settlers increase in number from year to year as and when the resources of the Republic are being tapped

cluded. New Granada and Venezuela The Colombian Government are doing much to encourage agriculture and live stock breeding and a number of eminently practical laws and regulations have been assued with a vew of assisting the profitent stock breeders to import Stud animals of Ped gree strains and to help the average cattle breeder to rear eattle for the recently started meat packing industry.
Thus the Department of Agriculture is lending capital on very generous terms to all who prove their serious intention of taking up hue stock breeding on lines adopted by the Department and one third of the purchasing price of imported Pedigree animals is paid by the Department while the cost of transport into the interior insurance and general dout of pocket andustry

Commercially Colombia is bound to play a very important role as speaking generally it is one of the richest countries in the world Its history was some what chequered until in the year 1810 the inhabitants threw off the Spanish voke and a few years afterwards formed the Republic which to commence with in expenses can be covered on application to the Govern ment-indeed generous terms almost without parallel in any other country. According to No 73 every year a sum of money is set aside by the Government to defray the cost of imports of Pedigree stud animals sold at public auctions where they can be acquired on long term conditions by acknowledged breeders A number of agricultural fairs and live stock shows under Government auspices now take place every year the idea being to demonstrate to the smaller farmers the difference between their own native live stock and the imported Stud animals meat canning industry seems to make progress and so far the output is entirely consumed locally as the Colom bians are noted meat consumers. When transport facilities can be extended to outlying districts undoubtedly on the stupendous stretches of Llanos where grazing is always abundant and the water supply as a rule adequate great numbers of cattle and sheep will find never ceasing and plentiful grazing. In the vast plains of the Orinoco water shed where now over 250 000 square miles of splendid cattle land he unused land is obtainable on the most generous terms and in the Sinu River district very large stretches of most fertile land as yet scarcely tapped are likewise obtain able Along the Casanare river in the Cauca Valley profitable cattle raising has existed for many years and magnificent cattle ranges can here be found in very great numbers Herds of from 2000 to 5000 head are often owned even by small farmers As live stock breeding will remain the mainstay of the country and probably the chief source of income for the indi vidual investor of capital Colombia possesses great national wealth so far scarcely touched As the Republic develops her already prosperous meat canning industry surplus will easily find markets in the neigh bouring countries. In many districts where Short horn Hereford and Aberdeen Angus bulls have for a number of years been crossed with the native cattle remarkable stock improvement is in evidence and the higher prices obtained by the cattle men for the cross products have undoubtedly contributed largely to open the eyes to the importance of better methods in breeding. What has been stated about cattle breeding applies to the breeding of sheep and pigs and great possibilities exist for breeding these two domestic animals. Until recently agricultural land was never fenced in but in many districts and chiefly in the Department of Antioquia farmers have now taken up fencing and this seems to have led to better care of the soil and extended use of modern machinery and tools Although the official live stock census estumates the domestic animals as stated above experts chiefic

domestic animals as stated above experts chiefly american live stock men who has extracted the Remme in every direction are confident that the extern stock is very much larger than it is difficult to the When the opportunities more officiarly and the confident that cause when the opportunities more officiarly and the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the

Livestock Breeding in Costa Rica.

The Live Stock estimate states cattle 437,000, pigs 77 000, horses 104 000 The number of sheep is unknown

This Republic is still in a very backward state chiefly owing to slack or incompetent government, but it is a country where the natural resources hold promise of development in the future Earthquakes are very frequent and probably no town in the Republic has escaped from such. It is chiefly on its mineral wealth that Costa Rica depends for her revenue, but as the climate is temperate with no extremes of heat and cold, and the soil wonderfully fertile it is as an agricultural country that it can best develop Costa Rica is one of the most beautiful countries on the American continent to a great extent covered by magnificent forests full of valuable timber such as mahogany, ebony, cedar, oak myrtle etc Cacao coffee, tobacco sugar and wheat besides bananas, are the chief agricultural crops, and as a coffeee producer Costa Rica ranks among the foremost countries There is a number of well conducted plantations where large which every 8 000 of the population send one herds of cattle are reared, and on the reported pig rearing seems to attract more attention of late. In the valleys between the mountains grazing is abundant and very good horses are bred in many places In the district round about San José at an elevation of 3 650 feet the interest in live stock breeding seems to be general and a number of breeders would be willing to acquire stud animals of Pedigree strains, provided propaganda on the part of live stock men could be effected. The Government are also interested in improving the existing live stock through the import of Pedigree animals and interested parties should be advised to correspond with the Department for Live Stock Breeding San José, the capital Costa Rica is geographically divided into five Provinces and the government is vested in a Chief Executive who is assisted by four Ministers The national legislation is exercised by a House of Representatives to

Haciendas-of which almost every one consists of The number of prominent live stock breeders here selection.

is, however, sufficient evidence of the awakening many square miles of land, while large numbers of interest for improved live stock breeding, and it is cattle, sheep, pigs and horses could easily be mainprobably only a matter of time when Ecuador tained. It is a sad fact that farming in Ecuador, as it will discard the old fashioned methods in breeding is now carried on, is very wasteful, very neglected, and the "scrub" give way to breeding through

Livestock Breeding in Guatemala.

The Live Stock estimate for Guatemala states. cattle 262,000, sheep 102,000, pigs 53,000, horses 55,000.

The "Asociación General de Agriculturos," Calle Oriente, 1, Guatemala City, is an Association of the more prominent live stock breeders and agriculturists in this Republic, through which imports of Pedigree live stock into Guatemala are arranged. A number of bulls are being imported every year from Spain for the annual Bull Fights, a national institution almost indispensable, while the number of Pedigree stud animals imported for breeding purposes is increasing. The United States of America is so far the chief supplier, having during the last two years exported 459 head of Stud horses, cattle, sheep and pigs, to the total value of about $44,000. Sheep breeding in Guatemala is lately enjoying considerable attention through the Department for Agriculture and stock breeding, caused by the visible changes to the good which have been achieved during the last five years through a number of imported rams, supplied by breeders in the United States, and the native breeders commence to realise that increased wool production and larger carcases bring better income than coarse weel and had meat from the native sheep. Propaganda mala holds undoubtedly a future in sheep breeding with a view of drawing the Guatemala breeders' attention to the value of organised live stock breeding would probably lead to business in Stock for those who may be interested in taking up this field. Sheep breeding is chiefly carried on in the "Altos," the very high parts of the country where the temperature is cool and pleasant. These sheep are reared for their wool from which the natives make a coarse twilled fabric known under the name of Gerga, sold to cloth makers who turn it into plaids and other articles of clothing, the plaid being a most important garment, and used like the Scotsman's shawl, as a substitute for a coat. Quite large quantities of these "Panchos" are required every year and this, of course, is bearing upon the wool industry,

Cattle breeding is also given more attention, and the Association of Agriculturists-farmers and breeders -arranges for local Shows held in various parts of . the country where the native breeder can see for himself how modern machinery and first class breed animals differ from what he is accustomed to. Guateand pig rearing, but the country is only just emerging from its obscure past, now fully conscious of the importance it might play in the future. Railway construction is larging behind, preventing the population in many parts of the country from moving about Coffee is the chief agricultural crop, but tobacco and indigo, and in some parts of the country cocoa, are extensively cultivated Fully 71% of the total of exportable articles are absorbed by Germany The population is probably about 2 000 000 and of these 65% are pure Indians. The principal ports are San José, Champerico and Ocos on the Pacific side, and Livingston and Puerto Barrios are the main ports on the Atlantic side The capital, Guatemala la Nueva a steadily expanding town, with beautiful parks and buildings, etc. is in the interior. Here the trade of the Republic is centered, and any movement in favour of extending or improving the breeding of live stock would have to meet the acquiescence of the politicians as in Guatemala everybody who really counts as somebody, is 'in for politics The soil is generally most fertile, and would yield many times more than at present if the art of farming was more seriously pursued Guatemala is a remarkably beautiful country, with a very intelligent people, although inclined to take life somewhat too easily. In the lake districts the climate is often depressing but in the Tableland it is mild and salubrious, and always agreeable and the native live stock reared in these districts testify to the fact that soil and conditions are very favourable for domestic live stock breeding Owing to its proximity to Yucatan, the influx from Mexico of breed animals is at times quite perceptible. The drawback in this beautiful country is the frequently occurring earthquakes Live stock breeders, interested in the possibilities of opening up trading with Guatemala, can obtain inormation concerning live stock etc. by communicating with the Secretary, Asociación General de Agriculturos, Calle Oriente, I, Guatemala City

The Association publish an Agricultural Bulletin in which from time to time interesting statements are made in regard to farming and live stock breeding Some years ago at a Live Stock Show held in Guatemala City the exhibits in the Class for Dairy animals were mute remarkable and certainly illustrated that milking cattle are now bred in the country quite com parable with such in many other countries. Through the importation from time to time of Shorthorn bulls several herds have been greatly improved, and the butchers pay much higher prices for animals on hoof from such herds, the meat being marketed as Durham" meat Among the dairy cattle strains preference seems to be given the Black-White Friesians, in this country called Holstein cattle, and in various parts where the breeders have opportunities of supplying milk to a town, quite good Shorthorn herds are maintained In the district near Guatemala City, Guernsey and Avrshire cattle are very frequent. It is stated on good authority that the native cattle Criolla, are everywhere assuming larger size, better appearance and vielding a larger quantity of milk through the influx of blood from these now mentioned breeds article of trade of some importance skimmed milk, is largely consumed and it is generally held that the milk skimmed from Jersey cows is of a better quality than other breeds. The consumption of dairy products is on the increase as the demand for better butter and cheese is now more general, and the Department of Apriculture hold that Guatemala may develop as a dairy product country Large quantities of imported condensed milk and powder testify, however, that the home production is not keeping pace with the consumption

In the Territories known as 'British Guana,' 'Guyane Francais' and 'Dutch Guinan —or, as the Dutch call this Colony, Surnam, the breeding of cattle, now a not inconsiderable pursuit could be very greatly extended as these three Colonies only divided from each other through light boundaries hold very vast lands of wonderful pasture Especially is this the case in the British territory where on the extensive savannas very large herds of cattle are bred, the value of which however, is very questionable owing to lack of railway communication roads, and transport facilities for bringing live stock down to the coast. Speaking in a wider sense, the Guiana lands really include a considerable position of Venezuela, and that part of Brazil which lies north of the Amazon and the Rio. Negro Rivers. The climate is very humid but not unhealthy, and the temperature is always high. Everywhere, all over the three territories, the soil is remarkably fertile. As regards the British territory, it is almost entirely unexplored. In

The number of agricultural schools all over the of Chambers of Agriculture, spread over the various country is increasing, and as these are chiefly visited by the sons of the large Estancieros and live stock | live stock breeder might with benefit to himself send breeders, propaganda material for improved methods in breeding might advantageously be distributed these Schools and Chambers as well as prominent breeders

cattle 1,210,000, sheep - .- . pigs 13,000, horses 31,000 The Live Stock estimate for Nicaragua states

With only a very small white population, the! majority being Indians, Negroes and Mulattoes, and grazing land not particularly abundant, it is understandable that Nicaragua has almost no sheep breeding industry and comparatively very few pigs. As regards cattle breeding, however, this branch of farming has developed very rapidly during the last twenty years and the last census of live stock estimates the number of head at 1,210,000. The horse stock is over 30,000 The indigenous cattle breed is unlike the cattle in the neighbouring countries and may probably have originally been brought to the country through Spanish settlers A number of American bulls which have been imported from time to time have proved suitable for crossing and probably a grading-up movement if encouraged by the Department of Agriculture and Live Stock Breeding, with suitable propaganda among the native live stock breeders, would result not reached one million yet in discarding a number of "Criollo' bulls milking propensities of the native breed are, however, quite good, and the milk rich in fat are very slow-fattening and the absence of good meat all over Nicaragua is a drawback that the visitor cannot help commenting upon. Nicaragua is a country of some size, the area comprising 50 000 square miles separated from Salvador by the Gulf of Fonseca on the Pacific side Generally speaking, the climate is healthy and the rainfall even in the wet season not excessive Coffee, tobacco, cacao and bananas grow abundantly, and in recent years the export of the banana fruit has placed all other crops in the background, the American steamship communication with Nicaragua for regular importations of bananas bringing much wealth into the country The chief towns are Managua, Lon. Matagalpa and Granada The population has

Livestock Breeding in Panama.

The small population in this Republic, so far not i even reaching the half million, and the lack of interest for live stock breeding and farming, together with the enormous heat during the greater part of the year. militate against the development of the country as a stock raiser, but it is likely that cattle breeding would prove a remunerative occupation in view of the every year increasing number of vessels passing through the country by means of the Panama Canal Some time ago a live stock census was effected according to which the cattle stock has sunk below the 200 000 head at which it was estimated in 1925, and the pig stock is now in the neighbourhood of 31 000 while the number of horses is scarcely more than 15 000 The insigniview is therefore, obvious

The total area of the country is 31,700 square miles Once upon a time one of the most unhealthy countries of the earth, it is to-day, thanks to the Americans building the Canal and extermination of mosquitoes, quite a healthy country where the soil is extremely fertile and all the usual tropical plants grow in luxuriance such as coffee tobacco, cocoa indigo sugar cane and vanilla Although the country is chiefly mountainous at least 25% of the total area consists of grazing land and land suitable for arable farming The number of rivers traversing the country in all directions is considerable, the Chagres and the Bayano rivers being the most important. The climate is dry from the end of January to early in April, when the wet season sets in and continues for the rest of the year. heance of Panama from the live stock breeding point of | From one point of view the country is remarkablethe entire absence of roads

Livestock Breeding in Paraguay.

According to the latest Live Stock census, the stock consists of 5 517,000 head of cattle, 601 000 sheep. 85 000 pigs and 493 000 horses

It has long been held that the excessively hot country of Paraguay makes extensive breeding of valuable live stock more or less impossible, but results obtained during the last ten years have sufficiently proved that this is not the case Indeed, Paraguay is really remarkable for its salubrity, and as the soil is of wonderful fertility everywhere and the vegetat on rich in the extreme, previous drawbacks in live stock breed ing must be ascribed to neglect on the part of breeders of late years that attention has been paid to the and owners

Among the various agricultural crops which in this country grow abundantly, tobacce and tea are now world renowned The tea is obtained from an evergreen plant, Yerba Mate, and sugar cane, cotton, rice and maize are cultivated all over the country. The vast stretches of pastures are remarkable for an almost endless extension, and cattle breeding has long been the chief occupation of the farmers, although it is only of improving the quality of the meat Thus, quite recently, the meat had no value at all and was often thrown away, the cattle being slaughtered for the sake of the tallow, the hides, skins and horns. Now. with a refrigerating industry springing up and developing by leaps and bounds, the value of the Paraguayan cattle is becoming more evident, and for practical purposes, live stock men in other countries may certainly look to Paraguay as a valuable field for their Stud animals. Such are now imported in increasing numbers from Uruguay and Argentina. It is remarkable that Paraguay has remained so long in a backward state of development, in view of the fact that civilisation among the Indians was introduced here earlier than in the neighbouring countries. As early as in the year 1528 the first steps were taken towards colonisation, and the capital. Asuncion, was founded in 1536. The influence to the good on the part of the lesuits was felt early in the seventeenth century, and thanks to this influence, the country was almost pacified through the gentle persuasion of the Jesuit Brothers; but their success was only the forerunner of trouble, as in 1768 they were expelled, and in the year 1811 the Spanish authority was thrown off. Later on a series of devastating wars against its neighbours, first Brazil, then Argentina and Uruguay brought disaster and ruin on the Republic, and only very slowly could the country recover and develop its natural resources. It is, on the whole, a splendid country whose well-being can only be developed through agricultural settlers, and as these are welcomed by the Government and all possible facilities are granted them, the influx from other countries is only a question of time. It is a country par excellence for the live stock man, and the tales of contagious diseases affecting the cattle stock, or poisonous insects making stock breeding impossible, are certainly tremendously exaggerated. As stated, the land is fertile and cheaply obtainable, and Paraguay could maintain twenty times the present stock. In the Agricultural High School at Asuncion excellent theoretical education in farming and live stock breeding is now obtainable, and the increasing number of pupils seems to demonstrate that the farmers of the country are awake to the need of modern methods in their occupation.

Livestock Breeding in Peru.

The Live Stock estimate for Peru states: cattle 1,294,000, sheep 11,331,000, pigs 426,000, horses 193,000.

During the last ten years a number of agricultural Stud animals have been imported into Peru for the purpose of pure breeding, as the native cattle, pigs and sheep are scarcely worth grading up, although, as a point of fact, Peru was once upon a time one of the most prominent breeders of Merino sheep. Owing to a number of circumstances, the existing stock had degenerated to such a degree that the live weight seldom reached over 40 lbs. and the yield of wool 1-2 lbs. As for sheep, so for cattle. The indigenous cattle breeds-there are four different types-have degenerated to such a degree that they are almost useless, nearly impossible to fatten, and wretched milkers as far as the cattle stock of the lowlands are concerned. In the sterras quite a different type of cattle can be seen, healthy, well developed and entirely unaffected by the contagious diseases which are very general among the lowland cattle. It is quite probable that these crossing with suitable bulls of highland breeds. As regards pigs-degenerate, wretched looking, useless animals, cruelly neglected, exposed to the vagaries of the climate, having to rely on themselves for foraging. This country is, however, certainly a fine field for a live stock industry, and the Government, wide awake to the possibilities of developing such on practical lines, are prepared generously to assist the live stock breeder; and as a very good commencement has recently been made through the importation of Southdown, Hampshire, Sulfolk and Shropshire sheep, besides a number of first rate Rambouillet rams a founddation has been laid on which the country undoubtedly can develop a very big sheep breeding industry.

The Government have established several live stock farms, and the model farm, "La Granja Modelo" at Chuquibambilla in Puno, 12,000 feet above the sea level, is forging ahead and now a subject for personal highland cattle could be much improved through visits of breeders from all parts of the country.

Livestock Breeding in Salvador.

The Director General of Agriculture at San Salvador, the capital of the Republic of El Salvador, states that the interest among the larger land owners for better breed animals points towards the possibility that the Government may consider the granting of monetary assistance to those who would decide to import stud animals for the improvement of their herds.

The latest live stock census estimates the cattle stock at 286,000 head, sheep at 21,000, pigs at 391,000, and the horse stock scarcely more than 30 000 Salvador is only a very small country, but in several parts the conditions for live stock breeding are quite favourable Almost every portion of the country is remarkable for great fertility of the soil, and according to an agricultural expert who recently travelled over the country, the state of cultivation is excellent-in the opinion of this investigator, Salvador is better cultivated than most of the other sister Republics It is chiefly as a producer of coffee that Salvador is known in the world trade, and resulting from the great attention the Government have for years paid to the necessity of improving the coffee plant and the crop set aside for export through grading and classification, the Exchequer of the Republic enjoys a steadily expanding revenue from the coffee export trade While not so long ago indigo was the chief commercial crop, little or nothing of this article is now produced. Where coffee is not cultivated, sugar cane, rubber and tobacco have come in vogue Another article of considerable trade importance is cultivated in this country, "Balsam of Peru," although the name is misleading The country is divided into fourteen Government Departments. or rather Districts and the population, now 1,100,000. is rapidly increasing Formerly a Spanish colony, Salvador was later a constitutional part of the Republic of Central America but when this was dissolved. the country declared itself an independent Republic Officially the country is stated to consist of over 13,000 square miles, but recent investigations hold that the area is scarcely more than 8 000 miles, and if this figure is correct, the expansion of the Republic is remarkable The country is very volcanic, in many places of a rugged appearance, but the charm of scenery in many parts is great. A number of beautiful rivers traverse the country, the largest of which is the Lempa river, forming the boundary between Salvador and Honduras In the district of the great lake Ilonango. splendid pastures can be seen where the cattle reach quite remarkable dimensions. A number of Estanciéros have recently imported prominent bulls from the United States, and the improvements of the herds through these have drawn the Government's attention to the desirability of granting facilities in aid of further imports. It is stated on authority that the improvements caused through crossing imported Shorthorn bulls on the native cattle have been most noteworthy The pig indigenous to the country is quite valuable as grading-up stock, but the absence of good stud animals where such could easily improve the herds is rather astonishing

Livestock Breeding in Uruguay.

By the Senserary, Agraphitural Association of Uruguay (Associatión Rural del Uruguay). Monte Viden.

The Livestock Industry is the mainstay of Unuquay, trade. Three and a half centuries are the territory which now comprises the Republic did not contain a single head of stock, but when the now begutiful City of Morre Video was founded in 1725 the country held some zs million head. In those days only hides and tallow were utilised, but later on when the salt meat trade was established meat from Lrusmay came into world-wide use. The Uniques salted beef obtained and now holds a great reputation in foreign markets. portunitary in Cuba in a similar manner the production of wool received a great stimulus through increased world demand, and has contributed in no small degree to the general well-being of the country With the establishment of freezing plants the first of which started operations in 1005 and of which there are now four capable of commercially handling meat on a large scale, the live stock industry entered upon a new and prosperous career, and to-day, with the Arzentine Republic, Lruguas claims pride of place in the supply of the best chilled meat delivered in the

English and other markets

Uruguay is in the temperate zone of South America, bounded on the East by the Atlantic, on the South by the river Plate, and on the West by the river Ururum, and borders Brazil on the North and East and Argentina on the West. Her area is 186,926 square kilometres. The average normal temperature of the whole country was from 1001 to 1025, 15.08 degrees Centuarede, records showing a summer heat of 21-8 degrees and 10.7 degrees winter. The population numbers 1,680,000 approximately 9 people to the square kilometre, and the Republic is divided into 19 Departments The landed (rural) estates comprise

The number of cattle and sheep was, according and this means a continuous development of the meet I to the 1924 census, 45 head of cattle and 77 sheep per source kilometre.

As stated, the industrial and commercial activities of the country derive their character from the breeding of live stock In 1905 the Friendice Uniqueva was founded, and to-day there are four large meathandling establishments, three in the Capital Department-Messrs. Swift s. "Le Unicurva" and the Articas," while the fourth, the "Apple-Uniquavan is in Rio Negro As to their capacity, in 1026 these establishments handled 715,000 head of cattle and 1,233,000 sheep

There are ten salting establishments engaged in the production of salted beef, and various factories for presered mest whose products are everywhere in demand.

The Acricultural Association of Uruguay, the oldest Society of breeders in the country, founded in 1887 Herd Books for the registration of pure-bred eattle, sheep pies and herses. The Republic to-day possesses excellent live stock and supplies high grade meat to many foreign markets. Separate Herd Books for the various breeds have been in existence for mam years, the entries to which are subject to most stringent investigations. The popularity of British breeds may be eathered from the following entries in the respective Herd Books, thus

Livestock Breeding in Venezuela.

The official Live Stock estimate holds the cattle stock in Venezuela to be 2610 000 head the pigs 518 000, sheep 113 000 and horses 171,000 estimate is correct, it would indicate that the cattle census is for the stock rounded up and maintained at the Ranches in various parts of the country, provincially registered, but, as the number of cattle roaming about over the large savannas and in the river valleys, chiefly in the Orinoco Basin districts, cannot possibly be estimated, it is probable that many million head of cattle, still unclaimed exist although they are no man's property

Venezuela has existed 100 years as an independent sovereign State resulting from the victory under Bolivar the patriotic leader who conquered the Spanish crownforces outside Caracas in 1813 It is a large country, holding an area officially estimated at 450 000 square miles but probably considerably larger as enormous stretches of land towards the Brazilian border have never been surveyed. The country can best be described as divided into three districts-the Guiana Highlands south and east of the Orinoco river, extending to the Parima mountains through which the country is separated from Brazil, the district of llanes or flat. rather low-lying plains stretching west and north of the Orinoco, and the mountain districts in northwest and north being the continuation of the eastern Cordillera mountains of Colombia Probably the Guiana Highland district is the most valuable as it has a remarkably fertile soil and enormous stretches of pastures, but the actual value to-day cannot be estimated owing to a total absence of community life as there are no villages, and the few cattle breeders found here live at distances between each other which require days on horse back to cover. The people whose only occupation is live stock breeding, the Haneros would be considered highly prosperous if they

some kind of organised and regular outlet for the sale of the cattle they possess, but the total lackof a transport system militates against them

Venezuela is a considerable producer of coffee, cocoa, tobacco, sugar cane, cotton, indigo and sarsaparilla, while the forests abound in highly valuable dye-wood timber, rubber, etc. Next to Brazil, Venezuela is the largest coffee producer in the world, and cocoa cultivation has lately increased so much that possibly the country may some day outstrip all other cocoa producing countries. In regard to animal life, the same species, varieties and types as are found in Brazil exist in Venezuela and here the most venomous types of the boa constrictor and anaconda add to the dangers in the wilds It is stated that the rivers in Venezuela hold more and better fish than any other country on the American Continent and that the turtles lay a larger number of eggs than elsewhere The petroleum deposits in the country are now being explored, and experts consider them very valuable. The total lack of a road system compels the traveller to utilise the pack animal and railway construction is only vers slowly being undertaken. The number of the population is not exactly known but I robally exceeds 3 000 000 Spanish is generally spoken, and the pasyl. consist of a small fraction of whites the descendants of the first Spanish settlers, and of the Intim natures. the original inhalitants

The actual agricultural districts may be estimated at 280 000 square miles. The last lands he in the valleys of Lake Valencia in the State of Catalata some distance inland from Pacify Calally Visualing to recent investigations. Venera to could conto make tain a population ten times larger than the present and the lack of actilera, shey besite and so they plant workers is retaining if set I in all exceptible Convernment, however, recognize that set ande large sums of money for the purpose of establishing experimental plant and live stock breeding stations. The chief work carried out at these stations is to ascertain how and by what means Venezuela can best develop her natural resources Recently a Department for Veterinary Research was inaugurated at Maracas where a considerable number of animals of the indigenous breeds are now under observation Modern agricultural machiners is being imported and the tractor seems to come in vogue. A land Law was adopted in 1912 according to which all land belongs to the State which alone can sell such to settlers Certain restrictions were adopted such as that of first class agricultural land only 200 acres may be sold to a foreigner and of first class grazing land no more than 5 000 acres of second class grazing land to 000 acres etc. The very best grable land can everywhere be purchased at from 150 to 250 an acre while the very best grazing land can be obtained at from £60 to £70 per square league (5 000 acres) As cattle breeding is the basic industry of Venezuels but no cittle breeds were indigenous to the country it is probable that settlers who came from Andalusia in Spain brought with them a number of cittle the presenters of the present breeds. In 1800 the cattle stock was estimated at about 1 100 000 head while in 1020 the District Inspector a estimates showed a total of 2 600 000 Breed ing is of course a matter of haphazards no system or method existing and little or no care given to the stock. According to an American estimate based on investigations in 1924 there were then roughly 1 250 cattle ranch owners whose total estimated cattle stock was tabulated at a value of about £4,000,000. One of the remarkable features of Venezuela is the enormous area of perfectly level land-indeed, one third of the total area or say 120 000 square miles as excellently suitable for citile breeding. In recent investigations on whill of the Covernment it was estimated that 15 000 000 head of beef producing eattle could be supported all the year through on these level plains The Onnoco Valley holds excellent cattle breeding districts as the elevation here is 650 1 000 feet above sea level It is a robable the fact that the total number of cattle ranches in this region does not exceed twenty chiefly in the Cuchiveros and Canara districts. As for the climate very severe drought is often experienced over the entire area of the grazing districts while at other times the rainfall is alsindant, and not infrequenth when the rivers the the lands get flooded As for the feeding of cattle the grass is everywhere coarse and the cattle seem only to care for the green shoots at the beginning of the rainy season. The dairy industry has developed during the last few years el will through goat milk production for cheese making but faires for futter making constructed on modern principles are coming to the lore. The cattle are chaefly suital le fer beef and the meat consumption in amported from other countries the towns is regulated through and herds of cattle loring one orderlup and driven to the or takers of the town and there less on hoof grazing until required. Fig.

breeding is of late enjoying more attention, resulting from the many dames, chiefly in the Caracas Valley, where quite good pigs are now bred for the local markets It is probable that the Puerto Cabello district is most suitable for the European settler. The larger land and cattle owners are now beginning to fence-in their lands this being necessary to prevent the cattle from roaming about and returning to the socannas It as probably reliably stated that in the Puerto Cabello district alone the number of excellent beef cattle easy to latten cannot be assessed at a less figure than 1 200 000 The largest cattle owner in the country is the Venezuela Meat Products Company which possesses over 6 000 000 acres in the Apure district-indeed this company owns enormous stretches of land into which probably no white man ever penetrated. The frozen meat industry seems to make headway in spite of the cumbersome method adopted for securing regular supplies of cattle. These have to be rounded up in the llamm and then driven over land through Maraca) along the Puerto Cabello highway, the transport requiring from three to four months time Puerto Cabello is an important export place for cattle supplies to Cuba I few years ago at the instance of the Department of Agriculture a census was taken of the large cattle ranches and the number of cattle in the Caudad Bolmar district the main supplier of live cattle to Trimidad and the French and Dutch Guiana This critile district divided into five regions, then held 715 cattle ranches with a total number of 178 000 cattle 6 400 horses 3 600 pigs 4 700 goats besides mules and sheep

As regards breeding of horses, sheep and pigs, many good horses are bred in various districts and Venezuela undoubtedly has a native horse material worth improving. There is certainly a very valuable field for the breeder of middle weight, strong and The indigenous sheep breeds two enduring horses or three are not particularly interesting, and there is room for improvement. The pig breeding industry as already stated as given more attention, by Government and ranch owners able and with Venezuela's fortunate position for the shipping trade, it is very likely that a reminerative trade in live animals as well as in salted pork could be worked up by enterprising live stock men who, as already stated could start business under favourable conditions and with comparatively little capital Venezuela is a line stock breeding country par excellence and when the country is better supplied with roads and communications it will undoubtedly develop very rapidly

Breeders of Pedigree In extock of various categories would do well to personally or through qualified experts investigate trade facilities as almost beyond ans doubt Venezuela will soon follow the example alreads set by Colombia Uruman, etc., and decide that improvements of the existing stock can only be effected through crossing with valuable breed material

The climate is healthy in most parts and if the usual precautions are taken by the settler, no great

risks need be run

Livestock Breeding in Afghanistan.

In this country with its severe cold during the winter and excessive heat during the summer months. and enormous stretches of sand, several types of quite good cattle are reared while excellent horses and very good sheep can be seen in many districts. The present Ruler is credited with a firm intention of creating better live stock in this country, having been immensely impressed by the types of domestic animals he had opportunities to see during his recent visit to Europe, especially in England The country is well watered and in the fertile valleys of the chief rivers-the Amu-Darva, the Murghab the Kabul and the Herr-Rud. delicious fruit grows in abundance, such as oranges, grapes, apricots, almonds and walnuts and wherever the breeding of cattle has been promoted through using good Indian sires, success has been achieved The Afghan clover plant grows in abundance, and is one of the most valuable of its kind

Afghanistan proper has an area of nearly 240,000 square miles and the population is estimated at about 5 000 000 A census of the existing live stock has never been taken and it is impossible to obtain a reliable estimate In the low lands vegetation is very much the same as in India, and cotton, sugar cane, rice and maize grow in abundance The Afghanistan tobacco is of good quality. The people enjoy the reputation of being the most turbulent of all the nations of the world. probably owing to the geographical position of the country, enclosed and surrounded by other warlike and turbulent races. The neighbourhood of Russia has always been the cause of restlessness and resulting political disturbances As the time passes on and the Afghan people have their eyes opened to the importance of modernising themselves in outlook as well as in methods undoubtedly the safety of foreign residents will be ensured and there is no reason why Afghanistan should not prove a suitable field for live stock breeders and settlers

Livestock Breeding in Arabia.

Arabia or more properly, the Arab country, comprises the large south western peninsula of Asia which is separated from Africa by the Red Sea east of the Persian Gulf, and south of the Gulf of Aden In this vast country the area of which is more than 1 200 000 square miles a number of independent self ruling tribes, constantly warring between each other, have lived since time immemorial whose chief interest in life is the breeding of horses cattle, sheep The mediæval designation of Arabia divided the country into three parts the happy Arabia the stony Arabia, and desert Arabia which names. however, were never adopted by the population which divide this large stretch of land into Hejaz, Yemen Hadramaut Oman and Hasa That part which is called Nejd is chiefly a vast tableland, divided by large mountain ridges where the Yemen uplands reach an elevation of 10 000 ft Generally speaking Arabian lands are remarkable for sterility, with few rivers, and only very few streams while the extreme dryness of the atmosphere and absence of vapour sometimes cause the country to be the hottest place on the globe and sometimes extremely cold. Thus at Muscat on the coast of Oman, the temperature is never below 100° but more often 115°. The Newl country is very fertile. It is largely bordered by deserts of shifting sands. The best cultivated parts Alej po, Damasons and I right with

are generally between the mountain ridges as the torrents during the rainy season collect soil spreading this over the valleys and thereby increasing the fertility. It is stated that in spite of the very great heat, the climate in Nejd is very salubrious a statement that is corroborated by the fact that very large numbers of sheep, camels and horses are reared here. There are three cities of some importance in this district, Riad, Oneise. and Bereide Wheat, rice and barley are generally cultivated, but agriculturally the Araba devote more attention to raising bananas, water melons and other garden produce while commercially speaking they concentrate on the cultivation of their date I lantations Coffee is likewise cultivated and Arabian Maha coffee has long emoved world rejutation for being the finest in the world although the truth is that this type of coffee emanates from Alvasma

In that part of Arabia known as Yemen and all h the most fertile region of the country, the chief counmercial activities of the Araba seem to congregate Here a considerable trade in cotton a wale with Min a and India and trading in ivors and dis goods has by centuries been under the control of Atalua i in is bints In medicial times the trade mutes of the incides in Arabs passed through Yemen when the startered from Rapidad covered the house numbering 140 000 camels carried the products of Arabia to foreign lands. The inhabitants belong to the Semitic race Ever since the earliest times Arabia was the seat of advanced culture. After the advent of Mohammed the various tribes of Arabia were con solidated and formed a great conquering State and for long Arabs led the world in literature art and science and they diffused their culture in remote lands. Thus Spain was early a scene of Arab expansion but after this country had thrown off the Arab voke in the eighth century Arabia fell to pieces and the change to Bagdad from Damascus as a seat of the Caliphs slowly brought on obscurity and confusion. In the eighteenth century the Wahabis rose to great power dominating all the other tribes. Since 1839 Great Britain has been in possession of Aden

The population to-day of Arabia is probably considerably over 3 000 000 of which 1 200 000

inhabit the Yemen and the Heiaz

As breeders of horses the Arabs were early pioneers and they are still to-day among the world's finest horsemen Earlier than in any other country of the world the Arabs learned to appreciate the value of

Pedigrees and it is no uncommon thing among the most noted horse breeders to find Records dating back for hundreds of years

As already stated sheep breeding is of some importance the two types being bred belonging to the fat tailed Persian type. The average wool production is stated to reach between 6 and 8 lbs per head and the mutton is of a peculiarly agreeable flavour Wealthy Arabs often own flocks as large as 20 000 and more The Arabian cattle are either white coloured or red with white spots of middle size fine build not particularly remarkable for milk yield although the fat percentage is high. In breeding among the herds has been carned on for very many years and the results are evident. There should undoubtedly be opportunities for cross breeding. As probably the greater part of Arabia is still more or less unexplored and large herds of cattle and flocks of sheep are known to be reared in the valleys it is impossible to obtain a reliable estimate of the existing live stock but the numbers are probably very con

Livestock Breeding in Borneo.

All categories of live stock are bred in the island which is in parts still almost unexplored and in those parts which are under British and Dutch influence serious attempts are made to improve breeding. A live stock census in the strict sense of the word has rhimoceros the elephant and the civet cat. The not been taken and the statements which are issued number of wild pigs is probably very considerable. from time to time in regard to the existing stock seem to point towards a very small number of cattle. In the interior indigenous cattle sheep and pigs exist but their number cannot be ascertained. The total area of Borneo is probably about 290 000 square miles As stated much of the interior is entirely unknown When the island can be more widely developed most certainly opportunities will open up for the settler Borneo is the lifth largest island in the world situated partly in the northern and partly in the southern homisphere Large mountains cover part of the surface and between the mountain ranges are very large alluvial plains often awampy and unhealthy The highest known mountain range is the Kinabalu in the British portion of North Borneo where the elevation reaches nearly 14 000 ft. A considerable number of large rivers traverse the island many of which are navigable such as the Barito the Rejang and the hapmas ravers. While the leat is not generally As ressive Borneo is not a particularly healthy place

It has been described as in most parts a seething jungle densely clad with rich and varied vegetation In the interior a number of wild animals exist such as the panther the bear various species of apes the and if these could be rounded up and crossed with boars of European breeds most likely a useful cross breed would result. The natives Dyaks and Malays are remarkable people in many ways. A considerable portion of the population consists of Chinese and half breeds The larger portion of the island in the southern central and eastern sections was taken in possession by Holland and is now controlled by Dutch officers and officials who supervise their districts through native chiefs. The Dutch portion is divided into two Provinces the west Borneo and the south and east Borneo A large part of the island consists of the self ruling States of Brunes and Sarawak, and the remaining portion ancluding the island of Labuan con statutes British North Borneo a British Protectorate

The number of dairy cattle in the British portion probably reaches 8,500 and in Brunes between 500 and 600 and the number of pigs is estimated at 5000 and 700 respectively. These estimates however are

Livestock Breeding in Ceylon.

According to the Live Stock Census from this Island the cattle stock may be estimated at about 1 420 000 head buffaloes at 425 000 goats 155 000 pigs 48 000 sheep 60 000 and horses only about 2 000 The Government Live Stock Returns mention some interesting results concerning breeding from imported Ayrshire bulls to the effect that all the imported bulls after having become acclimatised have shown very good condition, while proving depend able stock getters. These bulls have been chiefly used for mating with pure bred Scind cattle and in some instances with cross bred Scind Ayrshires calves born have generally proved satisfactory being very vigorous and at the birth much heavier than the pure bred Scind stock With the exception of colour the calves as a rule very closely resemble their sire Other points of considerable interest for judging the ments or dements of importing pure bred Pedigree live stock for grading up the native cattle are that the back in the cross is perfectly straightened out with a total disappearance of the hump disappearance of drooping hind quarters upright short ears of the calves as compared with the long narrow ears of their dams a flat forehead well sprung rounded ribs and great ability to withstand the climate and resist diseases The Live Stock Department sums up the results thus far achieved as eminently satisfactory and the Veterinary Officer finds justification for recommending to owners of Scind cattle anxious to improve the milk ing qualities of their herds the use of these bulls The Government are working unceasingly towards the improvement of the live stock of the Island and have succeeded in eliminating diseases of a contagious i nature At the Government Dairy Farm near Colombo where Pedigree cattle are kept interesting experiments in breeding and feeding are being carried out with satisfactory results. The native breeders are having the r attention drawn to the results accruing from breeding from valuable Stud animals whereby the poss bility of avoiding diseases increases. The importance of cleanliness and better sanitation is also being emphasized At the Ambepussa Experimental Farm a series of experimental plots are planted with Paspalum for the purpose of improving grazing The meat supply is now being regulated through an Ordin ance according to which cattle and buffaloes can only be slaughtered through Government permit and in accordance with strict regulations. Undoubtedly this Ordinance will powerfully assist in preventing the Ceylonese farmers from supplying badly fed animals and incidentally it has led to improved methods in breeding. The supplies of slaughtered animals are chiefly drawn from the western north western north central northern and eastern Provinces No buffaloes

I are being slaughtered unless certified by the headmen as unfit for agricultural purposes. In the Province of Sabaragamuwa where large herds are reared by the natives difficulties have been experienced in enforcing cattle disease regulations chiefly owing to the animosity on the part of the headmen who are every where the largest owners of cattle but thanks to the Government enforcing their regulations co operation is now willingly forthcoming and cattle disease is certainly on the wane As and when contagious diseases can be fully overcome and the natives induced to abstain from indiscriminate breeding Ceylon will probably prove a good field for the exporter of Pedigree live stock as the native population is interested in live stock breeding in which they find a safe source of ancome

Cevion is indeed a country blessed in every respect by nature and without many difficulties a live stock industry could be created from which a considerable export of slaughtered animals would find markets in neighbouring countries The total area of Ceylon including some of the small islands close to the coast is estimated at about 25,000 square miles. Everywhere the soil is very fertile and the vegetation luxuriant Coffee and tea plantations abound Cevlon ranking as third in the number of tea producing countries of the world The climate is of course tropical but the heat is always tempered by the proximity of the sea The rainfall is nearly 80 inches The bulk of the popu lation are Singhalese the rest among them the Tamils and the so called Moormen of Arabic descent are all pursuing farming and stock breeding Cevlon has been in the possession of England since 1795

It has long been known that the local stock is totally madequate to meet the requirements owing to very scanty food supplies and the general indifference of owners in regard to feeding and selection. In the past the pastures have never sufficed for the main tenance of the stock and until the Government recently made concentrated efforts to improve conditions cattle as well as buffaloes seemed to degenerate 1018 a new policy was adopted bearing upon cattle breeding and general improvement of stock and i revention of disease while providing for communal grazing grounds since when very consideral le im provements are noticeable. The large numbers of wild boars roaming about are always a danger to the pig stock as very often they are carriers of the tape worm For a number of years cattle sheep and gruts have been imported every year from In his-12 000 15 15 000 cattle and 90 000 sheen and goats an apite of the fact that Ceylon should be alle to lived its supplies

Livestock Breeding in China, Manchuria, Mongolia and Tibet.

Ill kempt dirty, ragged and uncouth looking is. in one sentence the adequate summing up of the Chinese Line Stock With few exceptions, the domestic animals in China have exactly the same appearance—as far as one can judge—as thousands of years ago as agriculture farming methods and live stock breeding have scarcely changed much for the better And yet China is a country where some day live stock breeding will probably become one of the dominant features in the daily life of the Chinese of whom only few ever experience the luxury of eating the meat they themselves produce in the shape of cattle and pigs Some years ago a prominent German Veterinary Officer-M Pfeiffer stationed at Kaumidrew the attention of German breeders to the great field in China for the export of German live stock and in the March issue (1906) of the Berlin Vetermary Weekly a very interesting article appeared dealing with the various existing breeds. Several attempts to introduce German bred animals in Mongolia and elsewhere resulted and various reports were received testifying to the great success of the imported animals but the Chinese revolution and the successive internal wars and eternal disturbances put a stop to further trials

While in Northern and Central China there is an almost unlimited market for Pedigree strains for cross ing on the native live stock more difficulties have to be overcome in the southern parts where however it has been sufficiently proved that through care and systematic precautions in dealing with imported live stock immunisation can be carried through A British concern the Dairy Farm Company at Hong Kong probably the largest live stock breeder in South China has largely succeeded in conquering climatic and sanitary difficulties and the Stud animals the Company maintain at its dairy farm now fank among the very best live stock in China The Company maintain a herd of about 500 Ayrshire cattle and 400 to 500 Friesians besides a herd numbering from 500 to 600 head of large and Middle White Yorkshires Large Blacks Berkshires and indigenous Chinese breeds. This Company has been breeding during the list thirty five years constantly fighting against Rinderpest Anthrax Tuberculosis Foot-and Mouth disease and Abortion but has now successfully over come all these difficulties. Among existing animal diseases Rinderpest is probably the worst Practical results in breeding have demonstrated that breeds such as Ayrshires Friesians Guernseys and Jerseys when crossed with Indian bulls breed a progeny able to withstand these diseases while at the same time increasing the milking ability in the crosses. Abortion has been more or less successfully combated but it a stated that steril ty very often follows in its train luberrulous has also been almost overcome in this tert of Ch na through immediate segregat on of direct to be overcome through taking immediate steps when appearing Pig diseases once upon a time very frequent in southern China are nowadays not so violent as they used to be but until innoculation of vaccine can he strictly enforced in the Chinese own breeding establishments and farms Swine Fever will continue to exact its heavy toll As regard sheep, it has been practically demonstrated that sheep rearing is not only possible but even a remunerative proposition in southern China provided suitable grazing is available Scottish Black faced sheep have been imported from time to time and done remarkably well. Horse breeding is often reported as being hampered by the disease called Big head but experts hold that the occurrence of this sickness is always caused by a lack of minerals in the food. The same remark may be applied to cattle sheep and pigs and the simplest remedy seems to be a daily supply of sterilised bone flour or salt licks

In central and northern China where domestic animals are bred on every farm it is however impos sible to talk about live stock breeding as an industry The Chinese idea of breeding is the most primitive crossing and recrossing between progenitors and progeny occurs over and over again and obviously under such conditions the prospect of proper development of a live stock industry is very scant. In most parts of agricultural China three or more villages combine in maintaining a bull or a stallion etc. and these animals have to serve without any regard taken to conse quences In spite of this the Chinaman is an escellent husbandry man if his attention is drawn to the proper way of treating his stock

The live stock in China cannot be reliably estimated as no centure is ever taken, and the suesses that can be obtained from reliable Chinese sources are only rough estimates it is however probable that the actual existing live stock is quite considerable

The most popular among Chinese animals is probably the donkey which seems to enjoy more care than others The Chinese treat them well and seldom let them commence working until reaching an age of four years Some splendid strains can be seen especially in northern China and very good prices are obtained by local breeders. As regards cattle the Shantung cattle breed is quite valuable well developed of middle size in colour black or grey. or white spotted but more often dark red. The back is straight broad and well developed the skin very thick. The head is remarkable and seems more developed than any other part of the body The horns are rather short and yellow coloured. The tail is long, ending in big rough hairs In the Province of Chili there is another indigenous cattle breed somewhat larger than the Shantung breed probably originativa from Mongolia This breed yields splendid oxen much in favour with the Chinese for agricultural purposes contacts Front and Mouth duesse seems likewise. The best cattle breeds in China are however the Zehit, the Water Buffalo and the Yak Although cattle breeding is carried on all over China it may be said that only in the Provinces of Kwangtung and Kwangsi is proper attention paid to the care of the animals North of the Yangtse River where the cattle is often vellow in colour the prices obtained for the better bred animals are remarkably high In the Province of Honan the cattle stock is larger in size than elsewhere probably owing to the care the farmers here devote to their domestic animals. It is generally conceded that the Chinese cattle can be divided into four different groups of which the Honan breed generally sellow in colour is probably the best developed and with the greatest milking ability Crossed with European hulls as has now and then been done the progeny is stated to show remarkable increase in live weight as well as in milking ability. Another breed chiefly to be seen in the most northern parts of China are small sized cattle of a shiny black colour probably indigenous in the country The Zebu is held to be the most valuable of all cattle breeds owing to its immunity and suitability for crossing with other races Speaking generally the Chinese cattle breeds are all remarkable for very slow development lack of milking propensi ties but a great ability to exist on the scantiest and roughest of food It is the rule to leave the calf with the mother until he reaches an age of 5 to 6 months Stabling or cover against the blazing sun or the icy winter weather does not exist and the cattle are left to fence for themselves As milk is only sparingly consumed by the people the yield of the cow is seldom more than just sufficient to maintain the calf It is indeed remarkable that the Chinese breeder since time immemorial has never tried to develop his cattle for other purposes than as beasts of burden Probably the explanation is to be found in religious reasons

As regards the Yak originating from Tibet these cattle have spread over the Provinces of Yunnan Sze chuan and Kansu It is a remarkable animal suitable for draught as well as for darry purposes and as for riding probably few animals surpass the Yak in sure footedness over the most difficult country. The quantity of milk obtainable from a well developed Yak cow is surprisingly large taking its feeding into consideration—8 to 10 litres being the average. The milk is pale yellow of a pecul arly almond taste and the fat percentage as a rule between 5—6%. The Tibetans value the Yak milk very highly draining it with tea in which some cornflour is mixed the so called Tisamba dish Probably the Yak and the

Zebu cattle originated from the same progenitors. The Chinese pig although a sorry looking thing it is perhaps one of the most remarkable domestic animals of m. China and from this breed probably all existing or graces in all countries of the world have originated. Even the smallest farmer or land owner is a pig breeder and when the Chinaman moves to a new rural domicile he brings his pig with him. The same remark as a previously made in regard to the Chinese cattle breeds in may be passed in regard to pig breeding—that the Chinese pig of to-day closely resembles the Chinese is pig bred 2 000 years ago as has been proved by com parisons with old inscriptions. The best pigs are better bred Indian pigs is traceable. In the Province of Yunnan and in part of Kwangtung a remarkable looking pig probably indigenous can be seen a com plete dwarf in size but much cherished by the Chinese for its fine tasting meat. The Chinese call this pig the water pig In the north of China and in Manchuria a vastly different type of pig is bred in shape more like the Continental European landrace pigs closely covered by long hairs. Whither this type came has never been satisfactorily explained although more than one expert holds the opinion that it must have originated from Russia. All the Chinese pigs are remarkable for their fecundity litters less than ten being almost unknown While in northern China pig breeding seems to aim at producing material for the brush making industry in central and south China the pig is chiefly bred for the butcher. The manner of feeding the pig is all over Cl in a uniformly bad it being left to the pig to provide as and where it can In many places in China it is stated the pig is chiefly kept for its manure. In western China the chief purpose in pig breeding is to create the greatest possible quantity of fat which sometimes reaches as much as 65% to 70 of the total live weight. In these fat pigs it is stated the killing loss only amounts to 11-13% In later years however wherever the Chinese farmer is adopting more modern methols in soil cultivation and live stock breeding the pig is accorded better treatment and the feeding is then as a rule quite satisfactory beans potatoes and roots constituting the chief ingredients. The minner in which the Chinese live stock exporters and middlemen transport their pigs sold for shipment down the rivers to the ports and from there to other countries such as Java Sumatra etc is remarkable. With a view of saving packing space the pigs are given the day before being embarked a sleeping draught in the shape of a narcotic pill which as a rule keeps the animal un conscious from two to four days thus enabling the exporter to pack the live animal in a crate

As regards sheep breeding the most remarkable breed is the fat tailed sheep probably originating in Persia This breed very often develops four to six horns yields very fine mutton but very coarse wool Through spring summer and autumn the sheep are always kept on the move grazing in large flocks the owners of which may often amount to hundreds of people living in different villages guarded against the thief and the wolf only through the shepherd as sheep dogs are unknown in China Instead of the dog one or more bucks are kept to keep the intruder away When the sheep move on from one district to another in search of better grass the luck walks in front showing the way In northern China the sleen are shorn in the spring and in the a stump the wool merchants paying extra high prices for the string wool as being of much finer staple. Good wool fetches fro Tacls per Pikul as against 13-15 lack

Livestock Breeding in Annam.

When in the year 1836 French protection was a established over the kingdom of Annam, the ports of the country were opened for European influence and since then it has steadily developed. The Annamese territory now comprises the ancient kingdom only, and is part of what is peopraphically called French Cochin China. of which Cambodia and Tonking constitute the other important parts. The population is probably about 7.000 oog people and the area of the country 52 000 square miles. Cattle breeding is carried on extensively in some parts, the existing stock being indigenous and not of great value but here is a field for improvement through cross breeding. On many a farm where | objectionable forms cross breeding has been undertaken, chiefly with bulls of the French Normandy and Flemish races results are reported to be good. The Annamese horse is a valuable animal that could be much improved through selection and breeding. The Annamese natives are by no means so intractable as has been reported about them from time to time, but the difficulty in penetrating their minds and persuading them to adopt better methods in farming and live stock breeding is their abject superstition and a ridiculous veneration for the departed dead, a feeling that often assumes most

Livestock Breeding in Cambodia.

This country, an ancient kingdom now under | French protection is situated south east of Siam. and for the greater part consists of alluvial plains along the River Mekong which traverses the country from north to south At Pnom penh this river gradu ally increases in water volume, finally forming a great lake which lies partly in Cambodia and partly in Siam, one of the most peculiar of all the lakes in the world, acting as a powerful water regulating reservoir. The chimate is temperate and the soil exceedingly fertile vanilla cinnamon pepper, cotton tobacco etc. heing the chief crops Magnificent silk is produced and turned into lovely fabrics by the natives. The forests yield most valuable timber, and in this remarkable lake-Tonle sap-the fisheries have recently assumed very large dimensions and now supply a steadily expanding export trade Wild animals such as tivera leopards elephants and the rhinoceros are a constant source of danger to domestic live stock and farmers alike It is stated that the number of wild cattle roan it y about is increasing, and as among the various strains animals of quite good size and development are to be found it should be possible to round them up and have them crossed with valuable bulls with a view of creating a grading up stock for a canning industry

The population is small probably scarcely more than 2,000 000, but the uncivilised tribes called Kui, living in the more or less inaccessible mountains, may amount to several hundred thousand although a census has never been taken. At Pnom penh, the capital, a number of live stock avents have settled during recent years and several among these are interested in the question of developing cattle breeding through imported bulls. The breeding of pigs and sleep is considerable but as no reliable estimate of the stock is obtainable, the number of these domestic animals can only be sugged

Under the French Protectorate this still mediaeval kingdom seems to be increasing from year to year in prosperity, and the French Government are certainly exercising great efforts in developing farming and live stock breeding. Other important towns are Udong, Pinyalis, Sambor and the sea port of Kampot Speaking generally. Cambodia is a country with a future for live stock breeding, a most interesting country in every way, with a population that has proved adaptable in many directions to modern requirements

Livestock Breeding in Cochin China.

Annam, Cambodia Tonking Laos and Cochin China, considerable covers a total area of 310 000 square miles While in In Coch nules, with a population of nearly to million i.e. the live stock is very sparse so that the inhabitants conditions through this Service, and as there are law are compelled to import cattle for their maintenance regular cattle markets held weekly or fortnightle and as the annual consumption is more than 800 000 all the moortant places all over the district.

The Indo-Chinese Union of countries, comprising head of cattle, the imports from other regions are

In Cochin China, as stated, live stock breeding is parts very populous in other parts the population is neglected. The Government are however, lively very scantily spread and it is a curious fact that where awake to the fact that measures will have to be taken there are few people the stock of agricultural animals to increase the live stock and with this in view facili is the largest. In the Mekong Plains and along the ties are granted those who care to subject their breeding Red River, a district containing nearly 26,300 square to the rules of the Veterinary Department, and regulations issued from time to time by the Epizootic almost half of the population of the whole country | Service | Breed material can be obtained on reasonable 790

stock breeder would never lack purchasers. Lower Cochin China can best be described as a very broad. low-lying alluvial plain, which includes the lands in the very extensive river basin of Mekong While much of this coast region is swampy, the tableland, at an elevation of 3 000 ft, is very fertile, and here is certainly an ideal country for the cattle breeder as the soil is of remarkable fertility, producing the most luxuriant pastures The climate is probably unhealthy for Europeans in several parts, but on the table land it is more bracing and European settlers who have the chief sources of income lived for many years in this region have no complaints The population in this district is now about 1,200 000 of which at least nine tenths are Annamese. the rest being Cambodians and Chinese The French Government have established a system of excellent schools spread over the country through which love for farming and live stock breeding is being impressed upon the school children The buffalo is the chief farm animal and the export of buffalo hides one of

Livestock Breeding in Laos.

There is every indication that Laos is becoming a very important centre for the outlet of live stock products This country has the smallest population and is the least cultivated region in the whole of Indo-China, but the live stock is here particularly valuable and of some considerable importance. As a centre from which regular shipments of cattle are directed to Tonking, Annam Cambodia and Siam, Laos is growing in importance from year to year and the live stock salesmen here are doing a roaring business all the year round The present stock of cattle is probably very much larger than officially stated-1 000 000 headas in some of the districts belonging to Laos the last cattle census separately estimated the stocks at figures which taken, together, reach nearly 1,500 000 head The best districts for breeding are Luang

Prabang, Sam Neua Cammon and Tranninh where probably over 450 000 head of cattle could be rounded up, and in the Provinces of Pakse, Saravane and Savanakhet the local estimates hold the stock to reach 800 000 head Through the whole of Laos a plateau of tableland runs where remarkably good pasturage has for many years maintained very large herds of cattle, besides very large flocks of sheep. It is stated that the finest beef is produced in Tranninh Very large herds of grazing pigs almost everywhere bear evidence to the old statement that Laos is one of the best pig breeding districts in Asia The demand for pork many times outstrips the production and it is only surprising that live stock men in other countries have not yet had their eyes opened to the great possibilities in this respect in the country

Livestock Breeding in Tonking.

Tonking (Tonkin) is divided into two districts, the Middle and the Upper Tonking both of which are peculiarly suitable for all kinds of live stock Excellent horses are bred in a district known as Cao Bang while very good types of pigs are reared in the Provinces of Yen Bay Bac Kan, Lang Son and Bac Giang, but although the number of pigs according to official estimates is large, the Chinese markets and also to a certain degree the Malay States are always prepared to absorb much larger quantities. Sheep breeding is a highly paying proposition in the Province of Son La where three breeds exist all of outstanding qualities, belonging to the fat tailed type, probably originating from China All three types produce very good wool while the mutton is of an excellent taste area of Tonking is 49 800 square miles Prior to being annexed by France, it belonged geographically to the Lingdom of Annam and was administered as a Province Most of this beautiful country is watered through the Red River and its tributaries Without exception the soil is everywhere exceedingly fertile, and everything grows in abundance. The chief crops are coffee, tobacco hemp, cotton, and ramie, and Tonking is slowly developing as an industrial country Thus a large number of well constructed silk, cotton and woollen mills have been established at the largest towns Hanor and Haiphong, a circumstance that is in favour of extended live stock breeding as the consumption of meat and other animal products in these industrial towns is on the increase Besides these factories, the number of breweries and distilleries. iron foundries, etc. is annually increasing, and the industrial workers are on the whole well paid and thus able to afford a better standard of living The population in Tonking is now well over 10 millions influence to the good caused by the French Protectorate is now everywhere visible, and Tonking is developing in every respect and will probably become one of the highly industrialised countries on the Asian continent. All this makes for increased live stock breeding, and as the Department for Agriculture is anxious to develop this branch, the would be settler can reckon with assistance in various directions

Livestock Breeding in India.

The Live Stock in the Indian States comprises: cattle 26,240,000, sheep 12,000,000, horses 500,000. The Live Stock in British India comprises: cattle 117,325,000, sheep 22,282,000, horses 1,673,000

According to the latest census the population in | British India reached about 247,000,000 and in the Indian States 72,000,000 British India is, of course, the territory which is administered directly by the British Indian Government, whereas the Indian States are sovereign, ruled by Indian Princes, advised by resident British officials One of the remarkable features in India is the small percentage of people who reside in towns, as against about 92% in rural districts There are only 33 towns with a population of more than 100,000. There is much political unrest in India. Under the operation of the Reform Act the burden of Administration has grown very heavy, and the task of the British Government is becoming more complex every year Friction between Hindus and Moslems, and among the Hindus themselves caused by perpetual conflicts resulting from tradition of caste, and the growing dissatisfaction among the 60 million "untouchables" make the problem difficult. Pro-bably only 15—20% of the whole population is literate. More than one hundred different languages are in use, and of these eleven are spoken by a population of more than ten million people. India is primarily a country of small holdings where the vast majority of the people cultivate farms of from 1-8 acres, while large holdings are practically unknown. Farming is carried on in the most primitive manner owing to lack of working capital. Extreme poverty takes away any incentive to save money to improve the land, or to obtain better tools and fencing, and owing to his sluggish mentality and lack of education the Indian small-holder fails to grasp that improvement in his condition of life is possible. The co-operative movement among the rural population seems, however, to appeal to his imagination. In 1924 a Co-operative Credit Act was adopted providing for the creation of Credit Societies, and the number of these is now over 70,000, including Provincial and central Banks. Banking and Guarantee Unions, Insurance Societies, Agricultural Societies, etc., and the working capital of these now reaches 320 million Rs. Thus the cooperative movement is developing in many directions. such as lending money to members, purchasing live stock, seeds, machinery and tools; cattle insurance; co-operative marketing, etc. One of the existing evils is the sub-division of the land causing scattering of the holdings, obviously a serious impediment to agricultural progress. Probably 75% of these small agriculturists are not owners of the land they cultivate but hold it against rent collected by owners who are not farmers. Generally they are of poor physique. easily a prey to epidemics.

A matter of importance is the problem of future relations between the ruling Princes and the Indian Government. The Princes rule one third of India and one quarter of its population. It is recognised that closer political association must be established as both have the same economic interest in common,

The extension of Irrigation is another problem of magnitude. In the north enormous areas of less land have been transformed into extremely fertile soil where now large populations are maintained When the two large irrigation undertakings in the Sind and Stutley valley in the Punjab are completed, a district of 12,000 000 acres can be opened for cultivation. As Sind is rainless and one portion of the Punjab enjoys very hitte rain, the large quantities of water which in this mainner will be brought to the parched soils of these Provinces should attract huge populations. Other projects for irrigation are under consideration and thus by degrees agricultural undertakings will be carried out from which benefit to large masses of people ought to counteract communist propaganda among the poor farmers.

To everybody travelling through rural India the generally wretched condition of the cattle is evident The explanation is that for sentimental reasons the Indians never kill their cattle and therefore India is the only country in the world where no profit is derived from these. It is estimated that in the Bombay Presidency 25% of the cattle stock is perfectly valueless So long as indiscriminate breeding is permitted and unfit animals never killed it is clear that no improvement can take place. Among the general recommenda. tions brought forward by the Director of Agriculture. Bombay, with a view of improving conditions the following points are noteworthy The wandering professional breeder must disappear as he is constantly moving cannot store any fodder, and as his number is steadily growing the country is gradually being filled up with these landless cattle men. The settler who breeds animals on his own land should be assisted and encouraged In the grassland districts where extensive grass areas worth improvement can be found facilities should be granted to erect buildings for storing of hay and silage Bull breeding farms should be maugurated with a view of providing good bulls in the diverse localities Village Cattle Shows in the live stock breeding districts should be supported in every possible manner Experts should be stationed where live stock breeding takes place to advise the small farmers and breeders

The cattle breeds in India of which several have many inherent good qualities seem to deteriorate from year to year owing to the lack of skill on the part of the cattle breeders. The physical well being of the whole community in the country as well as in the towns is endangered through a permanent lack of safe and cheap dairy products resulting from inefficiency of the Indian milking cows, these cattle are weak and underfed but cannot be killed for sentimental reasons and thus a state of affairs exists that is almost intolerable. It is estimated that these useless cattle cost from 42s to 45s per head to maintain Their average lifetime is six years and when they die the skin forms and bones are worth about 10s. At the Pasteur Institute at Coornoor in South India where the question of deficiency diseases has been under consideration extensive material has been collected proving that the whole nation is subject to severe diseases owing to continuous malnutrition, but stitious people is difficult. The infant mortality in India is to-day higher than in any other country, due in a great measure to the lack of milk and very high prices. Some day conditions will change for the better when India will be open for stud animals of all kinds and categories and the improvement of the live stock will have to be undertaken throughout the country.

Of the cattle stock 22% is bred in the United Provinces, 16% in Madras 15% in Bengal, 14% in Bihar and Orissa, 9% in the Punjab, 7% in the Central Provinces, 8% in Bombay and 7% in the other Provinces As regards sheep 10% is bred in Bombay, 15% in the Punjab 12% in Bihar and Orissa, 12% in Bengal, 13% in Madras and 16% in the United Provinces Of the total acreage of India it is estimated that 427,100 000 acres are cultivated, of which 227 000,000 bear crops This enormous acreage offers stupendous advantages to live stock breeding The total area under progation is about 454 million acres, of which 20 million are irrigated through a Government owned network of irrigation canals 4 million acres are irrigated through privately owned systems, II milhon acres are watered through water wells. 6 million acres are irrigated through water tanks and 5,300 000 acres are kept under irrigation by means of many complicated smaller water systems

Horse breeding in India is probably the only branch of live stock industry that merits expressions of approval As a point of fact through the efforts of the National Horse Breeding Show Society and several other Horse Pony and Mule Breeding Associations, a steady improvement in the horse material is taking place The importance of utilising a well thought out system in live stock breeding is pressing itself on the people, and the increasing number of Government Stud Farms mostly under military supervision, have not failed to demonstrate to the Indian cultivator that valuable breeds can exist and yield good profits in India Sheep breeding in the north west of India is assuming large proportions and the introduction of Merino rams for crossing the indigenous sheep has had a powerful influence on the local stock. Merino rams are being imported from Australia in increasing numbers As for pig breeding, for sentimental reasons the pig is everywhere left to fend for itself

Cross breeding through imported pure bred bulls with the native indigenous cattle has in many places proved most effective although it may be questionable whether this is a good policy as infusion of foreign blood in the long end must decrease the immunity against diseases. It will probably be found that the better plan is to keep the imported breeds entirely pure, to create their immunity through the simple process of survival of the fittest and to retain the pure blood breeds by periodical infusion from the same source of supply.

India has several very good indigenous breeds Among these the following are probably the best diseases owing to continuous malnutration, but The Decca cattle small sized but compact and sturdy, to enforce changes among an ignorant and super-excellent for light field work, lively, not easily managed.

The Dongri cattle strong middle sized animals black in colour with white patches bad milkers

k in colour with white patches pau immedia The Gujarathi cattle although considered a pure race probably a product of cross breeding grow fairly quickly but are inclined to develop more bone than meat and are not particularly good milkers

The Kankren cattle large sized grey coloured breed suitable for almost every purpose lively very docile suitable for grading up through which the milk vield as has been demonstrated can be considerably increased They fatten more easily than other breeds

The Karachi cattle a nice looking small sized breed of an attractive red colour good milkers with a high fat percentage

The Khillari cattle chiefly bred in the Deccan where they are appreciated as field workers bad tempered fierce breed bad milkers white or steel grey in colour

The Krishna Valley cattle not bad milkers suitable for heavy field work develop good size and are perhaps among the best fattening cattle

The Malvi cattle perhaps the most beautiful cattle breed in India pure white in colour sturdy and quite good milkers They are held to be the best Dual Purpose breed in India

The Mysore cattle a strong well developed breed beautiful to look at with fine movements

They fatten slowly and are bad milkers

The Sindhi cattle a most useful breed for general purposes and the bulls have proved particularly suitable in other countries such as Venezuela Brazil the West Indies etc where the crosses have proved good milkers with good fattening propensities

The Sonkheri cattle good milkers and the bullocks are generally held to be among the best draught animals in India. This breed is red or red and white spotted

The Surati cattle red or red and white in colour are fairly good milkers and the bulls are often used for crossing other breeds as they are held to increase the live weight

The Talabda cattle probably a breed superior to many other breeds in India are not generally moved about to cattle markets and fairs. They are chiefly bred in the Surat district Their milking propensities are not particularly developed and they fatten very slowly but they are much liked among farmers

The Ongole cattle in the Ongole and Guntur districts the Kangayam cattle in the Coimbatore and the Jellicut cattle in the Madura Districts are likewise

breeds with inherent good qualities

According to the generally expressed opinion by the Imperial Dairy Expert Department of Agricul ture crossing of any Indian types of cattle with foreign blood with a view to improving the breeds is unsuitable and unless under specially sheltered conditions not practicable. India has the finest tropical cattle in the world carrying a higher degree of natural immunity to all tropical cattle diseases. The introduction of foreign blood destroys this immunity and cattle bred to foreign sires or dams cannot survive under ordinary Indian village conditions The encouragement of live stock breeding in India in so far as it affects cattle has been taken up by the Agricultural Departments of practically all the Provinces and the larger sovereign States In two of the Provinces and in some of the States steps have been taken to improve sheep breeding while in regard to horse breeding the Army Department through the agency of the Remount Department has done a very considerable and most valuable amount of work towards encouraging breeding of horses and mules for military purposes On the other hand little or nothing has been done or seems to be intended in connection with pig breeding. The number of Bull Stations is increasing chiefly in the States of Mysore Hyderabad Baroda Gwalio and Kashmir Stallion Stations are likewise everywhere being in augurated and the services of these are under the supervision of Directors of the Veterinary Services in each of the Provinces and in the here mentioned Indian States The ruling Indian Princes are almost without exception highly interested in live stock breeding and in many of these sovereign States considerable sums of money have been and will continuously be spent on breed improvement and development of the live stock industry. As it is only a matter of time when live stock breeding all over India generally speaking, must be subjected to the very strictest control, as proper organisation is of vital and paramount importance to the whole nation interested live stock men outside India would be well advised to examine conditions on the spot. They would in such event be surprised to learn the extension of the work that has already been done through the Agricultural Departments in the various Provinces These Departments, each under a director are

Livestock Breeding in Iraq.

The Live Stock estimate for Iraq states cattle --- sheep 5 058 000 pigs ---, horses ---

Iraq comprises the whole of the British Manda tory territory known as the State of Iraq This area of 116 511 sq miles contains firstly an alluvial plain stretching approximately two thirds of the length of the country Secondly, an area of desert land largely accounted for by the Syrian and Northern Arabian deserts which forms practically the whole of the south west and of the western frontier. Thirdly an area of hilly country chiefly of a limestone nature forming the eastern and northern boundaries of Iraq and leading up to the higher hills and mountains of Persia on the east and Kurdestan and Asia Minor on the north The climate of Iraq is sub tropical very little rain falling during the summer months. May and October are cool while November December January and February are comparatively cold wet overhead and muddy underfoot

The Arab population of Iraq comprises the desert Bedouin tribes which are nomadic and the settled Arabs living within the irrigated areas of the Euphrates and Tigris mainly engaged in agriculture Both how ever are breeders of horses sheep and roats and to a very much less degree cattle

The chief tribes possessing good numbers of pure Arab horse strains at the present day are

In addition to the tribal bred horses of good strain a fairly large number of exceptionally well bred animals is in the hands of the wealthy familes of Başhdad Basrah Mosul etc. Unfortunately there is much in breeding and breeding from zers or dams which although undoubtedly of good I nease are suffering from some hereditary unsoundness.

Ind viduals who have done much to maintain the purity of strain of the Arab horse in Iraq at the present day are

H.M Ling Faisal

HE Syed Mahmood Naq b of Baghdad

Apil Pasha Head of the Shammar tribe Fahad Beg el Haddal Head of the Anarza Tribe Daoud Beg D hagastani Baghdad and Suwaira Sheikh Ali Suleman Head of the Dulaim Tribe Sheikh Ali Kerim Head of the El bu Issa Tribe Thara

There is at present no written Records or Studbook of Arab Ped gree horses in Iraq nevertheless Ped gree horses eas the histories of the vanous sires and dams bein, handed down from father to son so that in the desert the average Sheikh can give a fairly accurate account of the Pedigree of his own or his neighbours horses A similar record of horses Pedigrees exists in the well known families of old standing thus Daoud Beg D hagastam or Sheikh Ah Summar are regarded as competent authorities to certify the genuineness of the breed of a certain, horse

The certificate given generally takes the following form

We the undersigned certify by the name of God who is always truthful that chestnut mare 4 years Broad Star Blaze sn p near hind etc purchased by from

A word of warning may well be added here in connection with the buying of so called high bred Arabs in Baghada or outside towns. The Arab horse dealer in general can soon compound and get his friends to certify that a certain horse. is of the highest blood in the land the furnished certificate with its numerous scals looking quite imposing enough to deceive the visitor to Iraq in search of horses. The truth about these certificates however is that they are often worth less. This does not mean that every horse dealer in Iraq is a rogue as some of them can be trusted implicitly.

The main strains of pure-bred Arab horses existing in Iraq to-day are

12 Kubar shan Umair Jaithni Abu Rumaeth The horse breeders of the Desert will rarely part with their mares, especially if they are descendants of the Asil family, if they do so at all, they will part only with a half share or sell a leg of the horse However, inferior bred mares can be readily bought. The Arab gives much more preference to mares than horses, and feels it beyond his dignity to ride a horse It is a common sight in Baghdad to see a notable of high family riding an extremely breedy looking animal in the streets, and it will always be observed that he is riding a mare and not a horse. The tribal Sheikh on any occasion of formality invariably rides a mare. considering that his prestige would be damaged should he appear on a horse The Iraq Arab horse as he is to-day is generally of small type, exceptionally exceeding 14-2 in height. In recent years, however, through whimsical crossing among the choicest strains, the height of the Arab horse has been improved; now Arab horses of 15 hands height or even more are available in Iraq in good numbers. Arab horses bred and reared along the Euphrates and Tigris are stronger than the horses of neighbouring countries, possibly due to the better climate. Perhaps there is also much in the Arab idea that the muddy though wholesome water of Euphrates and Tigris, and the type of barley produced plays a large part. It is known from the records of Damley that his Arab horse as a four-year-old was about 15 hands high, an instance of a horse originating from the desert west of the Euphrates All the Arab horses racing in India at present day are from Iraq Incidentally, the idea that an Arab horse cannot be taught to jump well is wrong Chestnut, Bay, Roan and Steel, and Iron Greys are the most favourite colours, and supposed to be the favourite colours among Asil horses; but other colours are also traceable Piebald, Skewbald, and Cream colours are exceptionally rare in Iraq Chestnut horses with a broad star, blaze, snip and all four white are liked by Arabs and considered by them to be very lucky. They are known in Arabic as "Panch Kalian

As regards breeds of horses in the Kurdistan areas of Iraq-although it is probable that most of the rich families could produce a Pedigree horse of long-standing reputation, generally the breed has degenerated.

due to had selection of stallions. Kurds however are considered by the Arabs to be advanced horse breeders Kurdish horses and breed horses in good numbers of the present day are coarse strongly built and are generally used for pack purposes They are good trekkers and possess strong legs and feet. No horse of Kurdish origin has been recorded to have shown prominence on the Turf either in Iraq India or any other part of the world

For the last five years efforts have been made to purchase high class Cavalry horses for the Iraq army but comparatively few pure bred horses could be pur chased Those purchased are in majority of Arab (2) Jaithai Abu Rumaeth sot mixed breed while a few are of Kurdi type

The desert Arabs and some notables of high stand my are particular in selecting sizes from the best strains for their mares but unfortunately owing to the great demand and high prices paid outside Iraq for stallions as compared with mares there are comparatively few well bred sizes available to them. It is known that a first class size is on an average put to three or more mares a day Less well bred mares are sent to indifferent Undoubtedly apart from breeding good looks and soundness are the first and most desirable requisites in a sire in this country however the Arabs attach little value to soundness giving preference over any other feature to the animal's breed. It is often found that a well known Asıl stre in Iraq has got spayins faulty conformation or some other undestrable defects vet his use as a size is not discontinued

In breeding is not discouraged at all to the extent it should be and nowadays it is quite common to find in one Pedigree stable a mating of several members of the same family. The main points observed in the Arab's system of breeding are simply that a Pedigree mare be put to a Pedigree stallion and the more reputed

the stallion is the better

It is quite evident that the breeding of Arab horses has been neglected for a long time Especially in the last thirty years and during the Great War a good deal of mixing of blood has been going on This has come about by the gradual introduction of foreign blood in attempts to improve the size. Thus prior to the war Turcoman and foreign sizes and mares were used and during the war many Austral an English and Indian country bred mares produced foals from Arab pony In an attempt to improve the breed and restore the prestige of the Arab horse especially in respect to his value for racing purposes which incidentally in creases his value for foreign markets an Arab Horse Stud Book has recently been maugurated by the Iraq Turf Club and since there are undoubtedly many cross breds in the country after the war only those mares horses and foals that are beyond suspicion as to their pure Arab breed are registered

During the war many military race meetings were held throughout Iraq the general idea greatly captured the Arab fancy and led to the inception of the Iraq Turf Club established for the racing of pure bred This gave a great impetus to more careful breeding in the tribes. It was found however that have been exported from Iraq

when the best Pedigree sires of Arab repute were put to Stud work they were often pronounced failures in getting foals of racing ability but some few proved to be win getters and are now considered by racing enthusiasts to be the best sires in the country

For example the Sire Kehilan Naw waq got Iafer Tair Young Sadiyan Salam Raja Collingwood Mallık U Zaman Ghasaeba Ras el Hawah

Shoga d Faeza Misna Gentle Lady Walika Bay Ronald Nurmahal

These horses repeatedly won and are now all in the first division some in Iraq and some running in India On the other hand previous to the start of racing many pure bred sires which the Arabs placed among the best stres in the country were found to pro duce horses useless for either long or short races must be admitted however that some of the best horses from the racing point of view have arisen from inferior bred stock as for instance Silver Dawn (considered to be one of the best race horses in this country) only from the obscurity of his origin is to be presumed that there must have been numerous crosses of good strains somewhere in his family prior to his being proved to be a first class race horse This could have been brought to light had there been any system of keeping records of Pedigree horses and their subsequent descendants. It is a pity that a country like Iraq possessing such good Pedigrees devised no more definite means of keeping records of these or pure breeds

It has already been mentioned that after the war some of the English and Australian mares were crossed by Arab stallions the offspring of these though improved in size are undoubtedly coarser than any Arab and there would be I tile diff culty in out such a coarse long headed cross from a well bred Arabs The reasons for this many firstly the English and Austr in this country were not thoroughbreds the climate of this country does not suit being generally observed that after a stay of in this country very many gradually lose and vitality at the same time it is the Arabs used any really high b above purpose Stallions are generally used for age of 3 4 years, while mares are used for stud purpose when re Recently some of the Arab and foals are generally turned loose in the open all day long. With freedom exercise open and fresh air colts and falles harden their legs and constitution and grow muscles instead of fat. Stallions with good temper are also let loose but both fore legs are hobbled and the bad tempered ones are kept thed up with a long rope away from the others. In the night they are shackled before and behind. Only during extreme cold weather are they pricketed under a camel hair tent.

England Arab horses find a ready market in India Levery year an average of four hundred horses are exported from this country to India the majority for racing purposes. The greater percentage of these horses are of well known Pedigree. Horses with racing abilities are generally sold at an average price of Rs 4000 - It is worth mentioning that only stallons are esteemed by the race horse owners in India. Mares which were fast in Iraq have proved fadiures in India possibly losing their racing power on account of climatic influence. Mares are served at any season of the year. Mares

The staple foods for Arab horses in this country are barley and Bhoosa (r.e. chopped barley straw) and when it is available they are fed with lucerne and green grass 10—12 lbs of barley and 12 to 15 lbs of Bhoosa considered to be sufficient for an Arab horse doing

ordinary physical work

Foals are generally weaned after 71 days and allowed free grazing in the blue. The colts are in some cases used for ploughing purposes with the result that they suffer from growing together of the vertebrae which affects them in after I fe The chief evidence of the identification of Asil or pure bred horse among the Arabis the oral tradition Foreigners might think that there is vast difference in looks between a Kidish or cross bred and a Khailan or pure breed but the Arabs never discriminate between them by the eye alone. When a horse is produced to an Arab which he has not seen before he will ask at once about his dam and size. He never assumes the Pedigree from the appearance nor attaches any importance to the statements given about the origin unless supported by a written document signed by Shekh of a Thibe whose integrity is known to him with seals of some reputed witnesses likewise known to him. There can be little doubt that in other countries a flating Kidish purchased from Iraq and Inted with an Asil produce turns out worse than the original stock. Of native Iraq cattle there are only two breeds the Zuberwich and the Iraquieb both of which can be truthfully said to be poor type badly nourished and with little milk. The Zuberwich cattle however are much the superior of the two and their place of origin is said to be Koweit on the Persain Gulf but unfortunately there are comparatively few of this breed in the country. The main use of the Iraquie he cattle is for ploughing but they have the advantage of being able to exist on very little God. Hence they are found in areas where

t would be impossible to keep other types of cattle

name and long Pedigree by some fraudulent Arab horse dealer is often employed for breeding purposes and in such cases it is only reasonable to expect that the

Attempts to improve the Iraq stock were carried out during and after the war. During the years 1917 1919 approximately three thousand five hundred Indian bred cattle of Sindi and Nansi breeds were imported by the British military authorities to meet their demands for dairy produce and supply to the military hospital. These animals were of the same breeds that the Indian Government official farms stock and their selection was the work of experienced officials of the Indian Farms Department.

The Sindi cattle are of a thick set type and average about nine hundred pounds body weight Owing to combination of hardiness and reasonable milking qualities they were highly successful in with standing the climatic conditions of Iraq. A fair average milk yield per lactation period for these animals

would be eleven thousand pounds

During the year 1910 the Military Farms Author ties acting on Indian advice and with a view to the further improvements of the dairy stock in Iraq imported sixteen Ayrshire bulls of known milking strains These bulls crossed with the Indian breeds have produced an extremely useful type of dairy animal capable of producing up to sixteen thousand pounds of milk per lactation period and at the same time able to withstand well the climate of Iraq. These half breeds are of a true Ayrshire type.

having lost the hump of the Indian breeds, and average

twelve hundred pounds body weight

The year 1921 saw the break of the Military Farms Department and the whole of their stock was bought by HM King Faisal and a British Dairying Company known as the Bashdad Farms and Dairy Company At the time of writing it is estimated that there are approximately six hundred half breed Ayrishire cattle in the country and so far the information in regard to the future crossing of these cattle is most disappointing as a further Ayrishire cross results in a reversion to the type of the original Indian stock complete with hump

No details are as yet available with regard to the miling qualities of this three quarter breed but it is to be anticipated that results here will correspond to those already obtained in India ie an extremely low milk yield

The Arabs from time immemorial have pursued their own primitive methods and little or no attempt has been made to improve the cattle which are diminutive in size and very poor milk producers

Indiscriminate mating is the rule Castration of undesirable bulls has been introduced by the Veterinary Department and is being appreciated by the Arabs

methods of breeding and shearing Though the country

possesses fairly good varieties of sheep there is a vast field for improvement by the introduction of foreign varieties

The following breeds of sheep are common in

Et. Awas—This variety of sheep was originally imported from Syria They are now available in Iraq among the Aniza Zruriych and Azza Tribes and are considered to be the best breed in the country. They are of medium size and strong build 3 feet in height with ears 4 inches long. The tail weighs about 15 lbs and is approximately 13 inches in length 7 inches broad. The wool is soft generally 7 inches long. Each sheep produces 14 to 15 lbs of wool per year. They are good milkers yielding 5—6 lbs of milk per day. The mutton is excellent They reach 90—100 lbs in weight.

NAIMI — These resemble the above variety except that they are somewhat smaller in size and horn less. This breed is found in Kirkbuk Arbil Mosul

and also among Aniza and Azza Tribes

ASHFAL —This variety is supposed to be the indigenous breed of Iraq available everywhere from Baghdad to Basra They are generally of black or brown colour and smaller than the above varieties possessing small ears and a fat tail 60 to 80 lbs in body weight. The ewes yield about 3 lbs of milk per day

KARADI—These are a Kurdustan breed chiefly distinguished by their long ears 6—7 inches. The neck is 1½ feet long and the body well developed. They have a fat tail 16 to 14 inches in length. The wool is long and coarse and used chiefly for making carpets and other heavy materials. This breed is brown and dark chestnut in colour reaching; noo—120 lbs in body weight. Ewes give 4—5 lbs of milk per day.

NAIDI —This variety is scarce in Iraq and imported from Najad and found only around Karbala They are the biggest of all varieties with long neck and body hornless the colour black with complete or partial white face tail very long measuring 18 inches in length reach 110 to 125 lbs in body weight. The ewes produce 6—8 lbs of milk per day. Unfortunately this variety cannot stand the climate and generally dies after a stay of 2 or 3 years in this country.

A sixth variety occurs at Rowanduz and is owned by Saved Taha the Oammag known as Oara Goz The variety was obtained by his father from label Ararat from the Russians. At present there are about 200 sheep. These live and thrive well in the colder climate prevalent in the hilly districts of Rowan duz They are slightly smaller in size than the Karadi variety. Their eyes are encircled with a black spot hence the name Qara Goz (Turkish-Qara Black and Goz eve) The general shape of the body is wedge shaped wide at the buttocks tapering towards the shoulders The loins are slightly taller than the withers the head comparatively small and the neck medium The legs are thin and strong feet black. The fat tail is rather small The whole body is covered by a silky white fleece The mouth is small and lips and nose

Angora goats are scattered all over the country the hair being largely used for making Kurd costumes The hair of the indigenous Iraqi goat is very coarse and used mainly for the Bedouin tents. They are

pastured along with sheep and thrive well covered black

The Arabs pasture their flocks in the desert changing from place to place as the food supply gives out. In Kurdistan the flocks are pastured in the villages outside the towns during the winter and spring. About June they leave the valleys and trek to the mountains for summer pastures from which they return in September. There are big markets for sheep and goats sheep dealers from Syria visiting yearly and purchasing a big number for export.

Mules are bred both by Arabs and Kurds These mules are of small type and not up to the standard generally required for military purposes They are

ordinarily used for pack and plough

white face tail very long measuring 18 inches in length and to inches in breadth tapering at the end. They Khanagin and on the foot hills of Badra

Livestock Breeding in Japan.

The Live Stock estimate for Japan states cattle 1,471,000, sheep 14,000, pigs 672 000, horses 1,592,000

The absolute maximum temperature is 98° and the minimum 15° The rainfall is abundant. In live stock breeding as in so many other spheres of Japanese life, great strides have been made lately and much attention is paid to improving the existing breeds, partly by inbreeding and selection and partly through the importation of Pedigree strains of horses cattle sheep and The Ministry of Agriculture has lately reorgamsed the Husbandry Department and through adopting modern methods in breeding it is hoped to improve the native live stock within a reasonable time. The Department of Agriculture embraces four general departments 1 e for agriculture- Nomul Kyoku for animal husbandry- Chikusan Kyoku' forest- Sangin Kyoku and for water cultivation - Suisan Kyoku Another department for nice cultivation- Besko Ku Jimusha -is perhaps the most important function of the Ministry of Agriculture The Zootechnical Department is divided into three Sections-for zootechnical purposes for horse breed ing, and for cattle breeding

At the Sapporo College at Sapporo in the Hok kaido working under the Imperial University faculties have been masuparated for Agronomy, Genetics Biology, etc. and lately University Demonstration Farms have been established in various parts of the country the total acreage for experiments reaching nearly 16,000 acres.

Commencing in the year 1872 the Agricultural College has slowly developed as an Institute for training young men in the science of agriculture and live stock breeding Since 1918 when the Hokkaido Imperial University was formed through an Imperial Ordinance with a faculty of Agriculture men prominent in their spheres have been engaged as demonstrators, lecturers assistants etc and the Institute is now developing on entirely practical and modern lines. At the various Zootechnical Experiment Stations— "Chikusanshi Kenjo —experiments in cattle breeding are being carried on, the idea being through experiments to discover which types or breeds may in the long run be most suitable for Japanese conditions It is aimed at developing these Zootechnical Stations to be Depots, spread all over the country, for the maintenance of bulls stallions, boars and rams for service on the local live stock. A number of Breed Associations— Chikusan Kumiai —have been formed or are in the course of formation and much good is expected to result from these as soon as experience has been gained To the Department of Agriculture power has recently been given to take all such steps

The Japanese Empire comprises more than 4 000 lodg, chief among them being the Yeso (Hokkaido) brednishu the Shikoku and the Kiu Shu The area is close on 237 000 square miles with a popular of nearly 76.5 million, or 322 people to the ire mile. As mulk production is being encouraged by the Government, it is interesting to note that there are now about 20 000 pure bred Friesian cattle, nearly all of which have reliable Pedigrees. The total number of darry cattle in Japan may be estimated at 125 000 of which 82% are stated to be more or less of Friesian blood. Sheep breeding long neglected, is given more attention and experts hold the opinion that the sheep raising industry will be given more encouragement by the Department of Agriculture than any other branch of live stock breeding. #### Livestock Breeding in Java and Sumatra.

The Live Stock estimate for these and the other small Islands which constitute the Netherland East Indies states

Java and Madoera	Head of cattle etc	Timor Bali Lombok Flores Soembawa Savoe Benkoelen Celebes and Sumatra
3 478,399	Cattle	833,207
2,201 419	Buffaloes	1 119 074
98,211	Pigs	842,346
1,291 677	Sheep	120 609
2,200 924	Goats	538,505

It is an interesting fact that in the group of Islands constituting the Netherland East Indies, live stock breeding is the most important factor in the occupation of the native population perhaps even more than agriculture. However it is noticeable that the horse population in both Java and Madura shows a tendency to decrease, a circumstance that is of some importance, the explanation of which is still lacking On the other hand, cattle breeding is steadily increasing, and so is pig breeding. In what the Dutch call the "Outer Islands -Timor, Balı, Lombok Flores Soembawa Savoe, Benkoelen Celebes and Sumatralive stock breeding is chiefly maintained for the Export Trade as proved by the fact that the annual Exports of bulls from Madura amount to some 60 000 head while from Bali some 35 000 head are shipped all the year round to other countries To day the Bali and the Madura cattle are pure bred and rank among the best of the various cattle raised in these Islands Natives have a shrewd eye for the advantages through crossing their cattle by bulls of outstanding ments and it is probably correct to state that everywhere the indigenous breeds are now being crossed by Hissar and Ongole bulls, with a view of increasing live weight for slaughter as well as for draught purposes The Ongole cattle are chiefly bred in Soemba and the Hissar cattle in Soembawa The Dutch farmers however, are chiefly using dairy cattle imported from Holland and Australia but Friesian cattle are now being bred in steadily incressing numbers from stock constantly recruited from Europe The Water Buffalo is increasing in number every year, owing to the fact that he thrives better in swampy clayey ground

The smaller domestic animals, like pigs goats and sheep are much cherished by the natures, and their economic value to the household is much appreciated Undoubtedly pig breeding will become one of the most attractive branches of the live stock industry, and in this respect there is much to be done by means of imported stock. The nature pig is small in structure and unattractive but on the other hand it is self supporting in every sense of the word. The quantities of exported pigs from Bils and Lombok are increasing the pigs being especially fattened for the export trate. The annual export figures may be estimated at 1 0 900

hogs from Bali alone In these Islands the num pig farms is increasing, and here the Industry is in the hands of the natives, and not the Chinese

The principal breeds raised in the Netherland

East Indies are

CATTLE Balmese, Madurese, Javanese, Sumatra Batak, and Achinese cattle Zebu Breeds Ongole Hissar European and Australian Breeds Dutch Friessan, Ayrishire, Jersey, Shorthorn and Hereford cattle

As regards HORSES the following distinctly different breeds are reared the Sandalwood horse, a beautiful highly valuable horse, and the best breed in the Islands, the Soenda—chiefly bred in the Timor, Roit, Flores Lombok Soembawa and Bali Islands. A great number of horses are imported from Australia great number of horses are imported from Australia As regards SHEFP The indigenous sheep is predominating Among other native breeds, mention should here be made of the following three very good types, the Donggala, the Madoura, and the Preanger sheep.

Pics—The Ball pigs exist in great numbers, as already stated. Among imported pigs, the Berkshire pig, the Tamworth and the Middle White Yorkshire are most in vogue. Here and there, the improved German Landrace pig is likewise to be observed.

Generally speaking the live stock in the Islands is steadily improving, thanks to the unceasing care and attention paid by the Government Contagious diseases once so rampant are slowly stamped out and the Chief of the Veterinary Service, who resides at Buitenzorg, in the Island of Java, exercises control of the Veterinary Service all over the Islands, where the work is divided into four Sections of control each under direct supervision of an Inspector, who takes his instructions from the Chief These Inspectors are highly skilled and have under their supervision Veterinary Surgeons most of whom have graduated from the University of Utrecht Of these four sections the first includes the entire eastern part of the Island group with Macassar as seat of the Inspection the district also including the Southern and Eastern part of Borneo The second Section, with Sourabaya as headquarters comprises Madoura the eastern part of Java and a number of Islands The third sectional Inspectorate centre at Bandoung, comprises West Java, etc ; while the fourth section, with Fort de Kock as centre includes Sunsatra and the surrounding Islands, and the whole of the western part of Borneo. It will thus be seen that the Dutch Government are controlling the health of the live stock by means of a well-established not all Veterinary Inspection Some pasts to sevents Dutob Veterinary Officers are develop all their time to the live stock industry, while ever one humbral nature assistants and a sine filts elecks are state seed all a ver the country, directly regional le to the surgions

head can be sold or moved from one place to another unless it carries a "passport' signed by the responsible officer in the village -a system that works wonderfully well, and aims at making cattle stealing impossible Live stock breeding is chiefly centered in the Islands of Java and Bali, for which reason they are mentioned as Cattle Districts,' in comparison with the Islands of Sumatra, Celebes, Borneo Lombok Soemba, Flores, and Timor where the Buffalo dominates and therefore are called "Buffalo Country Originally, it is held and probably correctly, all the cattle now spread over the many Islands came from Banteng in the Sunda Here the cattle are still living in the natural conditions roaming about, as a rule in herds of five to six cows with one bull They are perfectly wild, very shy, and considered capital sport for the huntsman

The various degrees of attention paid to cattle breeding in the different Islands signify the love, or otherwise felt by the natives towards domestic animals Thus the lavanese hold that live stock should maintain itself without any capital or care bestowed on them and therefore more often than not they neglect The Madurese on the other hand, love their animals, treat them well, keep them in stables during the hottest time of the day and hold that no feed is good enough Being more intelligent they early came to the conclusion that the qualities of live stock could only be maintained and improved upon through systematic crossing with prominent bulls of the cattle is everywhere the same, dark brown Generally the size of the cows is I to to I IS m, while bulls reach 1 20 to 1 25 m In Madoera, however, the bulls are better developed and of larger size 136 5 cm often being reached The average weight of a milking cow is 300 kilos. For the sake of milk production, the average cow only calves once in two years slaughter cattle are produced in the Island of Madoera from which every year from 50 000 to 65 000 head are exported to Java this live stock trade being perhaps the most important source of income. In Madoera the total cattle stock is probably near 800 000 head and there are many villages where from 800 to 1 000 head are kept and owned by the villagers. The hides are partly tanned in the islands where there are some European owned tanneries partly exported to Europe Without the slightest doubt, the Island of Madoera with its two million inhabitants and an area of nearly 450 000 hectares will become a very important live stock breeding centre Speaking administratively, the Island belongs to Java, and is counted as one of the seventeen Provinces under the Javanese Government The average native peasant is the owner of three to five head of cattle, not seldom up to ten and twelve depending on his personal interest in live stock breeding and the personal attention he may pay to his animals It is however not uncommon in the more prosperous villages to find natives who rear from 40 to 125 head of cattle or Water Buffaloes

The total number of milk cows in the Island of lava may be assessed at six thousand including those explains why such large quantities of condensed and sternised milk are yearly imported into Java Butter and cheese are not manufactured, curiously enough, as the making of these every-day-requirements should be a paying proposition. However, although slowly the dairy industry is expanding and the number of European cattle, chiefly Friesians from Holland seems to testify to an increasing interest in an industry that certainly should become flourishing as years pass by The main point is of course, the question of acquiring and maintaining first class breeding bulls. Their scarcity explains, no doubt, why native live stock breeding is on a low level

On the East Coast of Sumatra where there is a great number of farms belonging to European owners the Zehu is very much in vogue here called Bengal cattle. In the Medan district a considerable number of pure heed Friesian cattle are kept at the Plantations, and a very fine stock indeed is to be seen in the

neighbourhood

As already stated horse breeding in these Islands has not been increasing of late for reasons not satis factorily explained. Many good horses are bred here and it is probably true as stated by many Dutch investigators that the best types came originally from Arabian progenitors The stock of horses is spread over the Islands of Celebes Soembawa Flores, Timor and Bali, and probably the total stock in these Islands is well over one quarter of a million. For the sake of comparison it might here be mentioned that the total stock of horses in Holland is not very much larger The average height of these Island horses is scarcely more than 133 cm, more often than not below 113 cm The celebrated Sandalwood horse averages a height of 115 cm Considerable numbers are exported every year In Sumatra the Batakker horse is held to be a splendid horse for all round purposes, and this is the horse chiefly utilised by the Colonial Government, and much attention is now being paid to improvement of the breed On the Island of Java the Preanger horse is held in great esteem by the natives and Europeans alake He is remarkably endurable easily fed and of a pleasing temperament and appearance Australian stallions have been imported and used for improvements, however, without significant success Government maintain, on the other hand, a number of from 75 to 85 Sandel stallions and the mark these are setting on the progeny is noticeable. These Sandelor perhaps more correctly Sandalwood horses are the best and finest of all the horses raised in these islands They originate from the Island Soemba, and the export of this beautiful animal, between two thousand and 2 500, is the chief source of income for the island The stallions measure 1 26 to 1 35 m and the brood mares from 124 to 127 m Lately the Government have placed a number for service in the Island of Sumatra Sheep breeding is rather neglected, although the number is sufficiently important to warrant more attention being paid According to Government estimates, belonging to Europeans This relatively small number the total number of sheep over all the islands might be assessed at 2½ millions. As regards goats, the Government estimates are 3 millions. Even the smallest and most unimportant among the peasants is anxious to keep one or two sheep, stabling them as a rule over might in a kind of bamboo hut, raised one to two feet with a view of keeping the wool clean from dirt. The natives are as a rule fond of mutton, and the wool is a not inconsiderable source of income for the women. It is remarkable that wild sheep never existed in these islands.

As regards pig breeding, only black pigs seem to It is probab thrive. The Berkshire pig should undoubtedly find a great demand as and when its merits could be appre- of the population.

ciated. All the islands are full of indicenous pigs which cause much damage to Plantations. The number of domesticated pigs is scarcely more than round about one million, probably owing to the fact that the Mohammedan population despise this animal. The export of fattened pigs, chiefly to Singapore, is a not unimportant source of income, the Bali Island being the chief source of supply. The cruel Chinese methods of packing live pigs in cratest, keeping them there often three to four days without food and water, is here still in vogue. It is probable that live stock breeding in the Netherland East Indies will become the chief mainstay

Livestock Breeding in Korea.

The total area of the country is about 83,000 square miles and the population probably 16,000,000. A Japanese Live Stock Census, recently published, estimates the cattle stock at 1,605,000 head, the pig stock at 1,740,000, horses at 53,250 and sheep at only 2,500.

During the lifetime of the late Emperor, the breeding of cattle was encouraged by the then Government, but since Korea came under the Japanese sway, very little, if anything, has been done in the matter of live stock breeding. Many local conditions favour the rearing of pigs and sheep, especially sheep, and the summer is not too hot. The indigenous breed of cattle has probably emanated from the Yangtse Valley as it greatly resembles the types now bred in this part of China. As regards horses, the Korean farmer has always bred remarkably good such. Pig breeding has never been so extensively carried on as in China, but on the other hand, the Koreans treat their pigs better, and in this respect have probably drawn lessons from Japan.

Conditions in Korea are changing, owing to Japanese influence now being left in every walk of hile, but speaking socially, the old charm over the country has disappeared. Some thirty years ago when Korea was still an Empire it was one of the most pleasant countries in Asia for the visitor who invariably could count on the greatest courtesy displayed. In mediaeval times Korea was one of the most flourishing countries, but when the Wang Dynasty such cambed to Chinese political intrigues, and the country came under her surerainty, conduction channed rapidly. Americans, Germs to shut themselves up in their own country, without any intreourse with the western world, and so it on improved lives.

happened that nothing or very little was ever known or heard in Europe about the Koreans until quite recently. In the year 1881 the first sea port was opened for Japanese trade, while in 1882 and during the following ten years several foreign powers claimed and obtained the same treaty rights. While not so long ago the people were divided into the peasants-the producers, and the nobles—the consumers, and the Korean women shut themselves up, conditions are much changed and the Koreans have proved during the many hardships they have recently passed through that they are open for intellectual influence. Means of transport are very limited. The chief articles of trade are live stock products hides, skins, wool and mest-and minerals such as gold and copper. The skins of tigers and panthers, once upon a time a royal prerogative, are still articles of some value; and sheep rearing which not so long ago was forbidden, is slowly drawing the attention of the farmers. Few horses are utilised in agricultural pursuits, the oxen everywhere taking their place. The fattening of cattle is a not unimportant branch of agriculture. In the northern parts of Korea, still completely uncultivated, the soil is extremely fertile and this part of the country will probably be populated by Japanese settlers. Splendid barley and oats are grown here, and the Jinseng root, so cherished by the Chinese, the Koreans and the Japanese alike, reaches here in the north a very large size. With the influx of foreigners now living in Korea, Americans, Germans, Japanese, French and English, the demand for better dairy products and to be slightly impressing the Koreans much to be done in the way of live

Livestock Breeding in Palestina and Syria.

PALESTINA The importations of Pedigree live stock into Palestina have extended over several years. and thanks to the enduring efforts on the part of the Department of Agriculture at Mount Carmel, near Haifa, a great number of herds and flocks have been graded up According to the latest Census, the Live Stock amounts to some 390,000 head of cattle, 1,690 000 sheep, and nearly 55 000 horses The number of pigs is about 6,000. Until the great war Palestina was a part of Turkey and, as such, badly treated and neglected Although of a barren nature in parts, it is in other parts remarkably fertile Geographically, Palestina is divided into two portions, the west and the east of the Jordan, while agriculturally it comprises four distinct regions—the mountain region to the west of the Jordan, the plateau region to the east of this river, the coast land and the Jordan valley The highlands of Palestina are really a continuation of Lebanon, with the highest summit at Hebron, some 3,380 ft above sea level While much of the country appears rugged and naked and the rainfall is scarcely more than 20 inches the country is remarkably fertile in many parts where pastures abound and splendid cattle have been bred since time immemorial. Owing to the misrule of the Turks, live stock breeding and farming languished but under British protection agriculture seems to revive and much is being done in every direction towards developing the country's natural resources The pastures are remarkably nourishing for sheep and goats, and large herds of wild goats still exist. The Department of Agriculture is anxious to carry out a scheme of establishing Government Stud Farms in various districts and several Associations for the betterment of Jewish farmers such as the "Palestina Zionist Executive" the "Jewish National Fund," and the "Palestine Jewish Colonisa-tion Association have been chiefly instrumental in bringing Pedigree live stock in very considerable numbers into Palestina Undoubtedly the country is suitable for the raising of valuable stock and live stock men should meet with encouragement in any effort to find an outlet for stud animals The following agricultural Associations are interested in live stock breeding

Famere Union of Lower Galler Vabnet!

Syria As in Palestina, live stock breeding in Syria is a very ancient industry, as Syria once upon a time was the greatest cattle and sheep raiser in the Mediterranean Basin It is difficult to speak of Syria without including Palestina, as the Holy Land is really a part of Syria Syria proper holds an area of about 77,000 square miles, embracing the whole of the Mediterranean east coast It is a plateau land, remarkable for its many fruitful valleys where intensive cultivation has existed for thousands of years. Thus the valley of El-Buka has been a live stock breeding district for ever so long, and in mediæval days Synan merchants carried on a most lucrative trade in selling stallions, bulls and rams to many a European Royal Court Sheep breeding, of course, is the mainstay of the smaller farmers, and remarkably good strains were bred here before organised sheep breeding commenced in Europe As a camel breeding district Syria was early prominent, her camels being held in great value by all the surrounding tribes The population of Syria is now probably 2,650,000, consisting of people and races of great diversity, of which probably 75% devote their life and work to farming and live stock breeding

After Saladin, Sultan of Egypt, had conquered Syria during the latter part of the twelfth century when he extinguished the Kingdom of Jerusalem, Syria could never restore her erstwhile prosperity and splendour, and since the country in the year 1516 had become a part of the Ottoman Empire, Turkish misrule greed, and unjust taxation by degrees turned its large and prosperous villages and their valuable pastures into devastated lands, and with disappearing prosperity interest in sheep and cattle breeding abated. Like the farmers in Palestina, the Syrians are good stock

Livestock Breeding in Persia.

The exact number of Live Stock in this country has never been known as a census has never been taken That the number of sheep is very considerable is, however, well known, and as regards horses, cattle and mes many indications point towards an increased interest being taken in live stock breeding, not only on the part of the larger land owners but by the Government The recent political changes and the ascendance to the throne of a very active and far seeing man who is particularly interested in agriculture bodes well for the future Persia's chief drawback has always been and is still, her lack of railway communication, but as the long-needed Trans-Persian railway is now actually to be created, as capital for the same has been secured from Tea and Sugar Taxes, the total calculated cost £30 000,000 can actually be secured. One of the difficulties that has always been connected with attempts on the part of the European live stock breeders to encourage Persian land owners in the acquisition of Pedigree Stud animals has been the excessive cost of transport from the Gulf to Teheran, the Capital, £25 per ton or from the Caspian to the Capital, £10 per ton The railway rates estimated to be charged on the new system will probably only amount to a quarter of these figures The railway will start on the Persian Gulf at Khormusa, pass through Ahwaz, Dizful, Hamadan, Kazvin and on to Teheran, and through Firuzkuh to Bendergaz Speaking generally. the railway line will not present great difficulties in construction

Persia is a Plateau land from 2 500 to 3 500 feet in elevation with a very variable climate, in parts excessively hot almost impossible for human endurance. while in other parts the moisture is so excessive as to cause swamps In the Provinces bordering on the Caspian the land is generally well watered, well timbered and of striking beauty Although the country is well watered almost everywhere, the Karun is the only river really suitable for navigation. While on the Central Plateau the climate is very cold in the winter and excessively hot in the summer the dryness of the atmosphere causes the air to be very pure Sudden climatic changes often occur, detrimental to the development of live stock which, however, in spite of all the drawbacks seem to thrive well. Having passed the Persian Gulf where the land is barren, the Luristan and Khuzistan Forests commence, and then follows a belt where fruit trees and vineyards are of exceptional quality Detrimental to live stock breeding is, of course, the existence of many wild animals such as the lion the tiger, the leopard, the wolf, the wild bear and hyena The mountain sheep have developed in spite of these drawbacks, and, like the goat, attain considerable size The Persian horses are well developed and fine animals, and if selection in breeding could be systematically carried through, Persia should undoubtedly be able to develop a very valuable horse breeding industry Splendid mules are bred in many districts, and the Persian cattle are often of exceptional excellence

It is, however, in the field of sheep breeding that the Persian farmers have obtained a certain notoriety as they have for hundreds of years bred a type of fattailed sheep from which strains have been exported to Asiatic Russia, to Turkey, Armenia and Palestine Several experts who have examined the sheep stock in Persia hold that the Persian sheep is one of the best breeds in Asia remarkable for its endurance and ability to always breed true to type When live stock breeding can be given proper attention Persia will offer a vast field for expansion in the live stock industry and as the Persians are astute men of business, quick to take advantage of opportunities offering, it is most likely only the lack of propaganda on the part of live stock men in other countries that has prevented many a land owner in Persia from acquiring better stock

Lately, under the new regime, a Department has been maugurated for agriculture and handling of the Public Domains, and attempts are now being made to ascertain the size of breeders flocks, herds and studs. their requirements, the yield of the various categories of live stock and, what is very difficult, the material that is in the hands of nomadic tribes Organised live stock breeding is non-existent but, as stated the field is vast and opportunities considerable for those who would like to explore the same

An Agricultural Advisory Committee, recently appointed, is now permanently attached to the Ministry of Public Works and its chief function according to a recent Ordinance is to act as a central office for preparation and execution of any measure which may promote the development of agriculture and live stock breeding. With a view of popularising this measure, the members of the Committee represent smaller farmers as well as very large land-owners one of each category from every Province, and four other members who must be breeders of horses, cattle, sheep and pigs, and well-known in their districts. while three members representing the Minivstr of Finance, have been attached with a view of handling any measure involving outlay of capital This Committee meets during the first week of every month when suggestions or applications for assistance from the outlying Provinces in regard to live stock breeding. dairiyng, fencing, drainage, expert advice, etc., are considered, and any proposition, when sanctioned for execution, is sent to the Council of Ministers for approval

For reliable information as regards Persia's live stock industry, and requirements, the following are in the position of rendering assistance -

While a considerable portion of Persia seems to belong to the various tribes who are nomads moving from place to place and as a rule owners of large herds and flocks of cattle and sheep and often of mag milicent horses the bulk of the land is probably held by the great land owners As the interests and sym pathies of these are to a certain degree bound up with the monarchial system and this is now represented in the Meiliss or Parl ament it is probable that any reforms in live stock breeding if subject to Decrees issued by the Meiliss may have far reaching effects as obviously the great land owners would welcome any improvement in their occupation which may lead to increased income Much land also belongs to the very powerful Shiah Divines a body whose strength rests on feudal and ecclesiastical traditions, and whose properties are deriving their chief income from live stock breeding In Persia like everywhere else in the Far Persia herself

East the awakening is spreading about like a ferment and many remarkable results may lappen Persia has had a chequered career being period cally usurped now by one now by another strong man and the late dynasty the Kajar was like its predecessors dethroned owing to misgovernment With its enormous oil resources now exploited by British capital to the benefit of the country whereby large amounts of money annually flow into the Royal Exchequer it is probable that the country will be more open to sound political influence The influence of Russia felt periodically and always with disastrous consequences to the country will slowly diminish, and the manner in which the Persian oil fields are being worked under British co operation is bound to act as a political asset to Great Britain just as it is of great financial and material advantage to

Livestock Breeding in The Phillipine Islands

The Live Stock estimate for the Phillipine Islands states cattle 877 000 sheep 318 000 pigs 7 530 000 horses 296 000

the climate of the Phil ppine Islands was unsuit able for the white race-a misconception that has now been entirely done away with as a result of the marvellous progress in every sphere of activity caused by the American occupation. The Group of Islands consists of three thousand one hundred and forty one of which one thousand and ninety five are large exceed ngly fertile inhabited and suitable for The total land area is 115 026 live stock breeding square miles Heat and humidity are of course draw backs everywhere but in most parts of the Phill pines the heat is never extreme. The wet season is from July to October and during November December January February and part of March weather conditions are ideal the days bright and clear and the nights invigor ating and cool

Under American rule an admirable state of public order has been brought about and it is no exaggeration to state that life and property are safe all over the The Americans have established friendly relations with the larger portion of the wild people even the once upon a time restless Moro country having been subdued Already some thirty five years ago when the first American live stock breeders considered the possibility of taking up cattle breeding as a pursuit in the larger Islands the possibilities for developing a live stock industry were found to be almost without competit on The very large majority of small land holders in the Islands have however no land titles and as there are enormous areas of un occup ed unclaimed uncultivated land many of these small holders can eas ly be persuaded to move to better land and take up cattle breeding if encouraged Only

Not so very long ago it was generally held that I land to which owners hold titles and probably not more than half of this area is under organised cultivation Fifty four thousand square miles are covered by forest and the rest may be classified as agricultural land. To day any citizen of the Philippine Islands To day any citizen of the Ph I ppine Islands or of the United States of America over the age of twenty one years can obtain on the payment of $10 a forty acre homestead. This however he must cultivate during the next five years In spite however of these liberal terms the Phill pines have not shown a very great desire to become land owners probably owing to sheer ignorance. Thus since the Public Land Act took effect only some twenty five thousand applications have been received of which probably one fifth has lapsed owing to the stipulations not having No-one who has not travelled been complied with widely in the Phil ppines can be adequately impressed with the insignificance of the areas now under culti vation as compared with those which would richly repay it is the opinion of an American who acted as Secretary of the Interior of the Phil ppine Islands for twelve years and who had ample opportunity of studying the conditions and in a Report to the Government as a member of the Phil ppine Commission The country is failing to produce he stated that food enough for eight millions of people yet if advant age were taken of the opportunities which nature so bountifully affords it could readily feed eighty mil Asked for his opinion how the country could best be developed he stated that he would without hesitation give away the public lands of the Philippine Islands to such persons who would undertake to cultivate them Since the American occupation probably not more than some fifty thousand acres some 63,000 square miles can be considered as private have been sold to Americans and foreigners but it is probable that if a greater number of surveyors of public land could be employed and the privilege of obtaining free Land Patents on the old conditions could be renewed, and agricultural lands outside towns could be made available, the influx of suitable settlers would increase

In the Philippine Islands agriculture has always been, and will continue to be the main source of wealth In the lowlands conditions of soil and climate are very favourable for growing all the important tropical products According to the Philippine weather bureau. rain fall statistics are now so available that it is possible for a would-be settler to find out before hand which tracts of land are subject to drought or dry seasons or rain fall uniformly distributed throughout the year. The Filipino makes a good field labourer if properly fed and paid a reasonable wage. It has often been complained that he is lazy, but the reason is probably simply mal nutrition, as he has to exist day after day on rice and nothing else. Rice is the bread of the people and is produced in large quantities. Owing, however, to the most antiquated methods and in sufficient preparation, the quantities of rice produced in the Islands are not even sufficient to maintain the population, and the imports of the article have amounted to as much as twelve million Dollars a year

In 1888 rinderpest appeared for the first time in the Islands, and swept the country from end to end every year until the establishment of Civil Government under American rule was brought about For many years ploughing was practically impossible owing to lack of draught animals killed by the nest. The Bureau of Science and the Bureau of Agriculture established by the Americans, however, began a determined cam paign against this dangerous pest of cattle, and the fight has not ceased yet. but its ravages have been reduced to insignificant proportions Good draught animals are however, still fetching abnormally high prices While in the old Spanish days, before the American occupation ordinary oxen could be obtained at the price of $6 to $8, and an excellent animal at the price of from $12 to $12 50, the prices to-day are from $75 to $125 for an average animal, and from $140 to $180 for the better type The great shortage of beef cattle is very depressing and until cattle breeding can be organised on suitable lines, refrigerated meat must be imported in large quantities. This class of meat however, is very repulsive to the Filipinos who would immediately consume fresh-killed meat if such were available The importation of bovine animals into the Philippine Islands is however, restricted by law, and no imports can take place without special Permits granted by the Governor General concurred in by the two Presidents of the Chambers For this reason, there is scarcely any commercial farming actually engaged in the importation of live stock for breeding purposes, and as regards the export of hye stock there are no animals in excess of the local demand Permits, however, to import Pedigree live stock are obtainable and the imports of prominent breed animals should quickly prove remunerative if properly handled Varciano behaver a Chinese cattle were formerly imported in considerable quantities, but the imports are forbidden owing to the prevalence of cattle disease in the regions from which they came, and instead, the excellent Nellore cattle, one of the humped breeds of India, were imported To-day these cattle—Zehus—are found all ower the Phulippines, and as they are immune to runderpest they seem to be most autable for the climate As draught animals these Nellore cattle are superior, dating which is the producing excellent meat. According to an American investigator cuttle raising in Minduntho an large scale is certainly possible, and offers a most attractive field for investingtor.

The farmers in the Islands are, as a rule, an ignorant, superstitious lazy, underfed lot, a century behind the times in their methods, yet they are not impossible to deal with and if set a good example, the Philippine farmer will quickly respond. As regards health conditions it should be stated that almost everywhere these are now excellent. At Manilla the death-rate among the whites is lower than in many European and The present Government of the American towns Philippines is most effective and the state of public order leaves very little to be desired. Means of communication by land are now fairly good and improving, and there are many splendid and beautiful harbours in the various Islands, and nowhere difficulties attendant upon loading or unloading vessels. The natural resources of the country are vast. The gold mines are giving handsome returns

According to information supplied by the Department of Agriculture in the Philippine Islands, the vetermary service is well established. Agricultural schools and Stations where the Filipinos can learn rules of live stock breeding sugar and tobacc eropping, etc., are now spread over the most important Islands and among these the following should be mytion—

Livestock Breeding in Siam.

The Live Stock estimate for Siam states cuttle 4 015000 sheep ---, pigs 871 000, horses 248 000

As a cattle breeder Siam will probably become | mind prominent as and when her transport system is being improved. The existing sheep stock is unknown and probably of very little importance. As Siam is entirely an agricultural country, live stock breeding is obviously the chief occupation of the people The best cattle are bred in the north eastern part of the country while buffaloes are chiefly reared in the south Siam's export of cattle is comparatively speaking considerable chiefly to the Federated Malay States and to the Straits Settlements The quality of meat is fairly good and of late years seems to be improving. The Siamese Department of Agriculture is a very wide awake Institution employing a number of highly trained experts. Siamese as well as foreigners A number of Experimental Farms have been inaugurated during the last ten years and scientific as well as practical experiments are here carried out with a view of finding the best ways and means for improving the soil the crops and the live stock Rice is still of course the prime crop as it constitutes the chief food of the people but the methods employed by the average small farmer are antiquated and the yield of the soil is certainly not what it should he The peasants are still acratching the surface of the soil by means of a very antiquated wooden plough, and the value of deep plaughing and use of modern n arl mery and tools has not penetrated into their

Stock raising on modern principles should prove a profitable business as there is a ready market in the Federated Malay States and the Straits Settle ments, and as land is extremely cheap and the native cattle very mexpensive and have proved suitable for crossing with European breeds the progeny can be disposed of at remunerative prices. Grazing is very plentiful in the wet season. Good class native Siamese oxen weigh from 900 to 1 000 lbs on the hoof The Department of Agriculture recently commenced experiments in breeding with a view of improving the stock commencing with experiments on crossing the Indian Zebu Bulls with the native cattle. As Siam exports large quantities of pigs the breeding and fattening of pigs is becoming a very important industry the Secretary to the Ministry of Lands and Agriculture Bangkok

Although a large part of Siam is covered with forest and jungle the open land is more than sufficient to maintain the population which now number between eight and nine million. With the exception of ine forest parts of Siam the density of the population is eight to the square mile Wild animals like the tiger, leopard and elephant do considerable damage to agri culture and live stock but slowly modern systems are being adopted with a view of protecting the peasant farmer against encroachment upon his land in one way or another. The country has been divided into forty Provinces each of which is ruled by a Governor Politically there are 'spheres of interest in favour of France and England and the political system is monarchy Among the chief agricultural products besides rice pepper, collee cotton tobacco and sugar should be mentioned From a mineral point of view Siam is very rich. Originally the Siamese emanated from Mongolia The religion is Buddhist and the educa tion is therefore in the hands of the Buddhist Priests The Stamese is one of the most enlightened races on the Continent of Asia and their friendship for England traditional Agricultural schools are being established in many parts of the country and the learning of the English language is everywhere encouraged total area of Siam is about 222 000 square miles. As Lower Siam borders on the Straits Settlements and the Federated Malay States the influence of British sentiments and halits is easily understandable, and as education is penetrating and the necessity of improving farms agricultural methods becomes more dominant it may be expected that Sum will offer exceptional opportunities for breeders of Pedigree live stock. The Siamese are a charming people very reliable and of a kind disposition in their intercourse with foreigners. Rail way construction is increasing every year and Telegraph Depots are yearly opened up in new parts while Bangkok as well as many other places are being modernused in every way. The climate is on the whole healths, and experience has demonstrated that foreign breeds of cattle pies and horses are doing well

With the ascendance of the new Line there is a marked improvement in the financial position of Sum and the annual Budget is yearly showing a larger revenue. The new Budget commencing on 1st April 1928 is estimated at nearly 101 000 000 Ticals In this Budget a number of new items are provided for, such as railway extension road improvement air service live stock breeding dairying and experimental

Livestock Breeding in Turkey.

As no Census has been taken in Turkey since the war it is impossible to accurately mention the existing number of horses cattle pigs sheep and goats but well informed opinion holds that live stock breeding has been encouraged by the authorities and more attention paid to breeding Recently the Minister of Agriculture decided that steps should forthwith be taken towards improving agricultural and live stock conditions and a well known foreign live stock expert was engaged to survey conditions and report to the Government with a view of advising the Department of Agriculture on any imprevement that ought to be undertaken towards eliminating waste and develop ing existing breeds. An interesting report was finally issued and made available to interested parties and it is now obtainable under the title of Etudes Zoo techniques en Turquie According to this report the existing horse material in present-day Turkey is not particularly valuable as crossing and re-crossing has taken place between the Turkish landrace horse and various South Russian horse breeds without any regard to the consequences Crossing has also frequently taken place between the landrace horse and heavy Hungarian horses of the Nonius Freed the result being a progeny most unsuitable for Turkish conditions. On the other hand the frequent cross with English Thoroughbreds has been very beneficial and according to the report it has been demonstrated that the infusion of English blood has resulted in much improved size better and stronger less and general appearance As horse breeding has now for a very long time been carried on in the most harbarard manner in as much as heavy horses have been bred in the mountainous districts of Turkey where a small horse is required and smaller horses of the poin type being bred on the plains where the heavy horse is needed it has now been decided to develop two different types of horses-a light horse for the hilly and mountamous districts and a middle sired horse for the plains.

For draught purposes asses have since time immemorial been used in Turkey, but the freeding of these according to the experts achieve has been just as much neelected as is the case with horses-The existing I reed the Anatolian ass is a wretchedlooking animal ill fed and ill kept small without any strength useless for almost any purpose but as the Minister of Agriculture reasonable enough considered that the ass should be bred and for that type of farmer who cannot all sires will now be imported from a preferally from Cyprus in view of yprus asses originated from the Government maintain three Horse Breeding Stations of which the "Cara Dire-Bej" is the most prominent Here a number of Orient as well as Syrian stallions are kept, but the fact remains that the Turkish farmers do not seem to appreciate the value of improving their landrace breed.

As regards Cattle breeding in Turkey, conditions are indeed very bad and probably the Government will find themselves compelled to import some suitable breeds with a view of acclimatising these so that in time they may become national breeds. The existing native breed, or breeds are, speaking generally, of a very wretched type, small in size, narrow breasted, with badly developed hind quarters, of an ugly appearance, always underfed and consequently always under-sized The various breeds are probably more or less related to each other, and in colour they are mostly black but sometimes steel grey or deep red As these cattle have never been maintained or bred for the purpose of milking, it is understandable that they have never developed their milking propensities Milk is not expected, and as the meat is not in demand. their only function is to act as beasts of burden. The Turk does not deem the cow worth any other feed than such which the horses despise while at the same time demanding work from her and under such conditions obviously only very wretched animals are bred Lately the increased demand for better quality butter and milk points towards the possibility of creating better breeds. and for live stock interested parties Turkey undoubtedly offers a field worthy of exploration

On the other hand, sheep breeding which is an interesting occupation from the Anatolian point of view, has always been cherished by the farmers, and it is probably true that the sheep is the mainstay of the peasant who values this animal for its ability to yield wool milk and meat. It may be stated that most of the butter that is marketed in the provincial districts of Turkey is made from sheep's milk. The great demand for sheepskins for the morocco leather trade has always acted as an important stimulant in favour of sheep breeding. For centuries the wool of the sheep has been in great demand by carpet weavers and makers of cloth, and the great skill developed by the Turkish craftsman engaged on carpet making or weaving has created for him world renown, and this explains why for wool a high price is always paid by the village tradesman who in most cases acts as agent and purchaser for the big weaving establishments at Isparta Constantinople Smyrna and various other places Curiously enough, in spite of their apparent stupidity, the Turkish peasant farmers have always appreciated the value of keeping their sheep breeds unmixed and as all of these are more or less valuable and could easily be improved, the fact [ that they have been kept pure will assist the live stock improver. The reason is probably found in experience gained early to the effect that by crossing these breeds the staple of the wool could neither be improved nor the quantity of wool grown increased.

Among the more valuable sheep breeds the DALVET and the CARMAN skeep should be mentioned but a third breed the CIVERDIONEK sheep, is held to far outstrip the others All sheep breeds in Turkey must have originated from Persia, and it is remarkable that they all developed the fat tail. The above mentioned expert states the deplorable fact remains that nothing is being done to improve the breeds through selection and no attention is being paid to mating which is left entirely to the free choice of the animals themselves

One of Turkey's national assets the Angora goat, has spread to many parts of the world The goat is however, treated like the sheep and the cattle, and the Turkish peasant seems incapable of appreciating the fact that through selection of breed animals and better methods he could easily earn considerable sums of money through breeding for the export trade Turkish Angora goat is gradually losing its renowned qualities One hundred years ago the Angora buck when sold for breeding purposes to Egypt Russia, Afghanistan and India fetched a very high price To-day the Angora goat in South Africa and the United States is a far more valuable animal, and it is interesting to note that specialists who recently visited Turkey, strongly advocate that the Government should import Stud animals from either America or South Africa

Shorn of enormous areas of her former territory Turkey in Asia is still a country of some magnitude, comprising more than 200 000 square miles, with a population of 111 millions Being chiefly an agricultural country where live stock breeding is the mainstay of the people the field for improvement in this industry is vast. The present ruler a man of great force of character and remarkable energy, is credited with taking interest in improving livestock and farm ing methods, and as the old time Arabic letters since October 1 1928 were abandoned and the Latin alphabet by a Government Edict made obligatory. access for commercial penetration has been prepared, of which livestock men in European and American countries should not be slow in taking advantage. The soil is everywhere very fertile, grazing abundant, and the vast Anatolian forests are a source, scarcely tapped, of great wealth Tobacco is, perhaps, the most valuable of the commercial crops, while coffee cotton, olives and fruit cultivation yield considerable income Turkey, or more correctly, Anatolia, the "Land of the Rising Sun, has undoubtedly still an important role to play in world politics and commerce

PACIFIC ISLANDS

Livestock Breeding in Caledonia and Loyalty Islands

This Island Group now a French Protectorate about 1 100 miles distant from Sydney N.S.W. has a total area of 6,350 square miles. The chief town is Noumea where the Administration is seated main products are of the usual tropical nature and excellent coffee is cultivated. One of the principal export articles is cattle hides. Geographically the Islands are divided into the New Caledonian Islands and the Loyalty Islands Of these the Islands of Uvea Lifu Mare Huan and Walpole are the most The inhabitants in the Loyalty Islands have always been known for their pleasant mentality being easy-going and of cheerful disposition always friendly to strangers as contrasted with the New Caledonian inhabitants who have long enjoyed the reputation for being unreliable bad tempered ill mannered and far from friendly disposed towards the white man Under the French Administration pros interested in acquiring remunerative Stud animals perity seems increasing year after year while improved sanitation and many other regulations have stayed the death rate which not so long ago was very considerable Live stock breeding has always been a cherished occupation in the Islands where cattle sheep and DIRS are bred and where very good specimens can be seen There is most decidedly a field for the Live Stock man who probably would find a visit to the Islands both pleasant and profitable, and there is no reason why general live stock conditions should not be improved through imported breed animals. Of course the industry can never assume large proportions but as the well being of the inhabitants is steadily increasing and their taste for improved living conditions is stimulated through better wages and better prices obtained for their products it stands to reason to hold that a number of the small farmers might be

Livestock Breeding in Caroline Islands.

These islands once upon a time geographically known as the New Phillipines constitute a veritable Archipelago in the Pacific Ocean holding 677 small islands lying in 45 different groups. They originally belonged to Spain but were sold some 30 years ago to Germany which country had long cherished their possession as considered most valuable for overseas trading purposes The geographical position is 135 165 deg E Long Recently this important group of islands came under Japanese protection since when development has been rapid in every direction. Of all the Pacific Islands probably the Caroline Islands are the most interesting and it may safely be predicted that under Japanese protection trade will develop considerably Geographically these Islands lie in three groupsthe Pelew Group the Yap Group and the Turk Group The most important are the Panape the Kusaie and the Yap Islands The Administration is centered at the Turk Island While the trade in the usual tropical products is of a certain importance and the imports of Japanese cheap manufactures have lately increased considerably the live stock industry is the main source of income Cattle sheep pigs and goats thrive exceedingly well attain considerable size and it is possible that in the near future a profitable Dairy industry may develop as the Dairy cattle are being given special attention by the Live Stock Department A well known live stock expert from Tokyo who recently spent some time in the Islands to examine conditions is stated to have expressed the opinion that a considerable number of Dairy cattle should be main tained as the soil in all the Islands is extremely fertile The total area is nearly 600 square miles and the popula tion probably about 70 000 Since the Japanese took over the Islands the number of Trade Stations has increased and a considerable number of coastal trading vessels carry on the trade between the Islands Australia and Japan The chief export article is copra With few exceptions all the Islands are well watered with magnificent pastures where the cattle seem to thrive exceedingly well

Livestock Breeding in Cook Islands.

Since 1808 when England formally annexed | this Group of Islands, they have been a British Protectorate, and most of the inhabitants have been converted to Christianity. They are now a Dependency of New Zealand, administered fron the Island of Rarotonga, the most important in the Group, while the other important Islands are Atiu, Mauke and The Government are seated at Avarua In all, there are 8 Islands, situated between the 10th and 22nd Par of S Lat and 157-160 mendians of W. Lon. The soil is in all the Islands very fertile, and the usual tropical plants grow to perfection stock breeding, although not of any importance, is part of the agricultural activities of the inhabitants. and might be developed if opportunities were given them to acquire better Stud animals for breeding purposes Although not of considerable figures, the Trade is not unimportant. The climate is almost perfect, with very equal rainfall, and as land is obtainable on easy terms, many a settler would probably be able to create a pleasant life as a live stock breeder in these Islands

Livestock Breeding in Fiji Islands.

Since Fin became a Crown Colony of Great I Britain its live stock industry has made great progress Commenced about ninety years ago by the landing of a couple of bull and heifer yearlings, today, although by no means the most profitable industry, it certainly is the most wide spread. To day, cattle are bred both for beef and dairying purposes but the latter industry has only been established upon a sound basis within the last five years

Cattle have been raised successfully in Fin for many years, but the difficulty of disposing of the animals in numbers at a profit has hitherto limited production to the comparatively small quantity required for local consumption Proprietors of coconut plantations as a rule run stock among the palms when the trees have gained sufficient height to lift the crown of leaves above the destructive reach of cattle The animals play an important part in keeping down the undergrowth on the plantations and usually find a ready market with local butchers thus materially assisting to pay the working expenses of the estates Of late years cattle raising has been undertaken on a more extended scale and is gradually becoming a distinct industry of the Colony Suitable areas of country have been taken up for the specific purpose of stock raising, with the consequence that the establishment of works for the canning, cooling, or freezing of meat for export and local consumption is receiving serious The average quantity and value of preserved meats imported into Fiji each year during the period of five years ending in 1922 was 450 500 lbs value £23,220 It is anticipated that the successful establishment of meat preserving works in the Colony would supply the local market and secure a reasonable share of the export trade to the surrounding groups of islands, which at present procure supplies from Australia and New Zealand

The number of cattle in the colony is 700 000, of which the majority originated from Shorthorn and Hereford beef strains comparatively few dairying cattle having been imported. The equable climate renders it unnecessary to pay special attention to the Inspectors are Government Veterinary Officers. This protection of feeding stock during any period of the year There are no epizootic (epidemic) diseases None of the devastating cattle diseases as anthrax, rinderpest foot and mouth disease have ever found a Tsetse flies cattle ticks and such like home in Fin pests are unknown, in fact the Colony may be classed as one of the cleanest cattle countries in the World A strict veterinary inspection of all imported stock is made at the ports of entry to guard against the introduction of disease, and as a further precaution cattle dips are about to be erected

For more than 40 years small quantities of excellent butter have been produced by various settlers, either for use in their own households or for sale in Suva and Levuka, but it is only in very recent years that any senous attempt has been made to establish the dairying industry on a commercial basis

There is no export market for beef, except a small shipping trade, and production is in excess of consumption. The prices realised by the producers vary from 25s to 30s per 100 lbs dressed weight However these prices pay A canning factory has been in operation since the end of 1927, conducted by the Fin Development Company This should help to balance production and consumption of beef. It is estimated that there will be a market for all the beef canned in Fin locally and in neighbouring groups of islands

The breeds of cattle include chiefly Shorthorns and Herefords but there are also some black and Red Polls in the country Cross breeding is general, and in some districts quite a considerable amount of Zebu blood has been infused as a result of the popularity of the Zebu breed in Fin a few years ago

Dairy breeds include Milking Shorthorns, Friesians Jerseys and Ayrshires Greater effort is made to run the dairy herds on purer breeding lines than is the case with the beef stock

In Fin there is now a Stock Improvement Ordinance in force, providing that no stallion or bull shall be kept unless passed and licensed as suitable for breeding by an Inspector under the Ordinance is resulting in marked improvement of types of animals. and farmers, particularly those engaged in dairy farming, are keen on having pure-bred bulls at the head of their herds.

The horse stock is comparatively large, being used for hacking and plantation work Very few. however, go in for systematic horse breeding as a primary occupation, it being generally considered as a side line. Chidesdales and Suffolks crossed with light horses constitute the majority of plantation animals.

Imported mules were formerly largely used. The pig industry does not receive the support it certainly warrants from farmers, and large numbers of pigs are imported for slaughter.

There are few breeders of sheep, although most authorities hold that Fin has many natural advantages to offer for sheep breeding.

Owing to the comparative proximity to Australia and New Zealand, practically all new importations of live stock are from these countries.

Barber, J., Waimbokasi Bayly, J., Nadi

The following are the approximate numbers of stock existing in the Colony :

Horece 12 000 Cattle ... 70.000 Sheep ... 750 . . Goats .. 24.016 4,000 Pies . . Dairy Farms .. 40 Cattle on dairy farms 3.000

The special advantages which Fiji offers may be summarised as follows: cheap land; luxuriant growth of pasture: healthy and equable climate: unfailing water supply: freedom from serious diseases: cheap and suitable labour: convenient market and easy transport.

There is a good opening for settlers with some capital and experience in farming and dairying. At present local cross bred cows can be bought very cheaply in Fin and pure bred dairy stock can be imported from New Zealand at moderate cost.

Livestock Breeding in Gilbert Islands.

The almost entire absence of pastures in these i islands, which really are nothing else than coral stolls. makes live stock breeding non-existent as far as cattle, sheep and horses are concerned. On the other hand, pig breeding is carried on to a certain extent as the pig is a favourite with the natives. The number of breeding sows is quite considerable and if boars of good strains were imported, undoubtedly pig breeding would make headway. The population is about 44,000, nowadays all protestant christians, and for administrative purroses, they are under the same Government as the missioner, resides in the Ocean Island.

Ellice Islands, likewise a coral group of islands belonging to Great Britain. While the Ellice Islands extend over a length of 355 miles with a population of several thousand christian protestants, the area of the Gilbert islands is scarcely more than 175 square miles. The inhabitants are thrifty, devoting their time to the production of copra. Since 1892 when they were annexed by Great Britain, they have formed a British Colony. The chief Executive Officer, the Resident Com-

Livestock Breeding in Guam and Ladrone Islands.

This group of Islands has along the NS line between the 13th deg and 21st deg N LAT and are now under American protection as far as Guam Island is concerned, while the Ladrone Islands are Japanese possession Originally a Spanish possession the United States of America acquired Guam in 1898 as a result of the Spanish American war. The capital town in Guam is Agaña This Island is one of the most beautiful in the Pacific wonderfully fertile with a large number of small rivers traversing every direction, and with beautiful forest covering part of the Island Cruel slavery under the Spanish domination long existed but came to an end when the American flag was hoisted 30 years ago. Guam is the largest of the Ladrone Islands Its total area is probably 250 square miles The usual tropical plants grow in abundance such as spices coffee tobacco and cocoanuts. Under the American administration prosperity has returned and the inhabitants seem very happy under their present Rulers

The Ladrone Islands 17 in number, were first discovered by Magellan in 1521 since when they have been under Spanish domination until the end of the Spanish American war some 30 years ago The total area according to the latest Japanese survey is about 485 square miles Live stock breeding is being encouraged and according to a recent report from the Japanese Department for Agriculture and Live Stock Breeding, it is expected that sheep and pig breeding will be encouraged

Livestock Breeding in Hawaii Islands.

Since this group of islands in the Pacific Ocean officially known as the Territory of Hawaii became a possession of the United States of America live stock breeding has been greatly developed and the number of cattle-ranges now existing is considerable In the following list of breeders it will be seen that a number of beef producing breeds are now reared in the islands all with remarkable success Originally called Sandwich Islands so named by Capt Cook after Lord Sandwich these islands are forging ahead in every respect partly owing to the enterprise on the part of the United States Government partly owing to the great intelligence of the Hawaiian people who among all the Polynesian races are certainly the most gifted The present day population consists of Portuguese Japanese and Chinese settlers besides the natives but alter the year 1898 when the islands were annexed by the United States the American element is increasing area being estimated at about 7160 square miles The largest volcanoes in the world are to be found here Sugar cane cultivation and sugar making are the chief industries and fully 85% of the population are engaged on these pursuits Railway construction is extending and the steamship communication with the United States British Columbia Australasia China and Japan likewise extending and returns year after year report increasing tonnage testifying to a steady expan suon of the trade of the islands. From a live stock raising point of view it is a remarkable country as all kinds and types of domestic animals thrive here and increase in fecundity. According to the latest census the cattle stock may be assessed at 147,000 head pigs at 41 000 sheep at 47 000 and horses at about 25 000 head American stock men have practically proved that the islands are a splendid field for cattle stock breeding and beyond any doubt, pig breeding could likewise be developed to large dimensions Various black and white coloured pig breeds have been of the islands are inhabited—Hawau 4075 square miles introduced all doing well. ## Livestock Breeding in Marquesas Islands.

As a live stock raiser the Hawaiian islands rank among the foremost in this part of the world Eight

This Group of Islands belongs to France which country annexed them in the year 1842. The total area is nearly 250 source miles. At the chief town, Mukahiya, in the chief Island, the Administration is seated. The soil is remarkably fertile and the land well watered, with magnificent pasturage in all the valleys i where cultivation is well looked after. The inhabitants are very like the Samoa Islanders in type and mentality as well as in appearance, and it is generally held that of all the Pacific Islanders the Marquesas people have the best manners. Not so long ago given to warfare and cannibalism vices which the French Government rapidly stamped out, the Islanders are to-day very peaceful, but slowly dying out, as proved by the fact that 50 years ago the number reached over 60,000 while to-day there are scarcely more than 3000 left. a deplorable fact probably having its cause in mental despondency resulting from knowledge that their race is doomed. This, however, will give the white man a better chance, and undoubtedly live stock breeding could make good headway in these beautiful islands where everything is in favour of the breeding of cattle. pigs and poultry

Livestock Breeding in Papua (New Guinea).

. The natives in New Cuines are wrongly called negroes as they are of Malayan blood. They are good cattle breeders and pig raisers and attend to the live stock when they are not on the war path or basking in the sun. The actual number of the population in this part of New Guinea, now under Australian protection is not exactly known, but may be estimated at well over 1,000 000 The Island is still in parts totally unexplored Holland holds certain portions Before the war the German portion of the island was quite con-Papua probably embraces over 300 000 square miles, and is thus an area of very large proportions The natives are variably stated as deceitful and treacherous kindly generous, and reliable, but probably their mentality is the usual South Sea mind, full of con flicting impulses The country is well timbered and well watered and a series of mountain ranges occupy a not |

inconsiderable part of the island from NW to SE, such as the Albert Mountains and the Owen Stanley Range Some of these mountain ranges reach a height of 13 000 ft, where snow and ice are perpetual The rainfall is variable, from 30 in to 150 in The Wallaby is probably the most common among the wild animals, and as regards agriculture, the usual tropical plants grow luxuriantly, such as vanilla, tobacco. coffee, etc As Papua is now under the protection of the Commonwealth of Australia, it is possible that organised live stock breeding will be part of the Government s plan of development With possibilities for developing the indigenous breeds of domestic animals as the natives are now more tractable and can be persuaded to take up permanent dwellings, it is quite possible that Papua may develop a cattle breeding ındustry lying at 14 deg Lat and 168 170 deg Lon west of the Fin Islands The total area is considerable nearly 5 200 square miles with a large population, now probably reaching 80,000, erstwhile cannibals originating from New Guinea These Islands, numbering 30, all of which are inhabited, are now administered jointly by England and France The climate is very hot and humid While the summer is wet, the winter

This is a Group of Islands in the Pacific Ocean | light rainfall is considerably cooler. The soil is extremely fertile and, speaking generally, the Islands are very valuable and may probably be developed to yield a considerable source of income been known since 1606 when they were discovered by a sea faring man, Quiros by name, since when, however, sight was lost of them until in 1768 when Captain James Cook on his first voyage to the South Seas chance discovered them. For very many ownership of the New Hebrides was a source of much quarrel until Great Britain and France decided to jointly administrate them by means of an unwritten Treaty, and since the middle of last century the number of settlers have steadily, although slowly, increased. The largest Island, Santo, is 75 miles long and 45 miles broad, with large forests where the sandal wood tree used to be very common and a great number of very fertile valleys in which tropical plants grow in abundance, such as cocoa cotton and cocoanuts A number of prominent commercial Trade Stations have existed here many years carrying on an important trade with Australia. New Zealand etc. The soil is wonderfully fertile, and a number of myers add to the beauty of scenery Other Islands are Tangoa Aore. Malo, a very productive Island, Omba, with a fairly large population and considerable export trade in copra. Malekula, with excellent harbours and finbays: Pentecost, Maewo, known to seafarers as a splendid watering place. Tanna and several other Islands The natives inhabitating these many Islands are all Polynesians tall, light coloured, intelligent, and easy going, but they vary very considerably from Island to Island Not so very long ago these Islanders were subjected to the most cruel "black-hirding." often by force or fraud imported to the Plantations of Queensland from which it used to be stated, the only thing they brought back with them when set free was their ability to swear in English. The population is probably about 85 000 The Islands are very fertile; and as animal life attains remarkable sizes and development, the Live Stock man should certainly find a field here for his activities

Livestock Breeding in Norfolk Island.

The number of horses cattle, sheep and pigs in this island is of course insignificant, but for practical purposes there is no reason why live stock should not be reared in much greater numbers, or why the island should not develop a live stock industry, for the good of the people and with a view of acting as a Depôt for breed animals, as so many local conditions are favourable for this pursuit. Only recently some of the local British residents acquired stallions for general service, and many of the natives breed quite good cattle As in many other Pacific Islands, the pig is a treasured animal for the sake of its meat, and pig Once upon a time the island was a penal colony breeding, now very insignificant, should be given a stimulus through the importation to the island of some good strains The geographical position of the Norfolk Island is favourable for live stock breeding, lying between New Zealand and New Caledonia about I, 100 miles ENE of Sydney The island is splendidly watered, and the soil very fertile The climate is very healthy The population is insignificant If live stock breeding were given encouragement, probably a number of white settlers would take up residence. as life in the island would not be without a certain charm.

Livestock Breeding in Rotuma Island.

The Rotuma Island also called Grenville Island | hes about 12 deg lat 177 E LOV and has been under the Island According to the latest census, the British protection since 1879 when three of the leading population is scarcely more than 2 500, and Chiefs offered the Island to Great Britain The total

Suva while a European Commissioner resides in while live stock breeding is given some attenarea is about 10 000 acres the chief article of trade tion it is by no means the main occupation being copra Administratively, the Island is now of the Islanders who derive their income from the part of the Fiji Islands, and is governed from copra trade

Livestock Breeding in Samoa Islands

The Live Stock estimate for Samoa states

cattle 7,776, pigs 21 093, horses, 1,881

The predominating cattle are Shorthorn and After the initial period of acclimatisation is over stock in general thrive very well. It has been found however by experience that pure breeds imported from cooler climates unless carefully attended have a tendency to degenerate after a time and cross breeding is as a rule advisable

Live stock breeding as an industry is not yet engaged in the demand for cattle for local consumption being generally supplied from the coconut plantations where cattle are extensively used as economical weeders

Horses - Speaking generally the type of horses at present in Samoa is of rather a nondescript type and there is most certainly room for a good deal of improvement

SHEEP do not thrive lere and invariably suffer with foot rot Romney Marsh have been tried without success Local requirements have so far been met by

importations from New Zealand

Pics - Cross bred pigs do splendidly in Samoa but pig raising is conducted by the natives in a very haphazard way no particular attention being given to selective breeding Roast pork is as in all parts of the Pacific a favourite dish with the indigenous inhabi tants and there is room for good breeds

Domesticated pigs are running in cocoanut planta tions and are an effective enemy to the larvae of the

Rhinoceros Beetle (Orycles Nasicornis)

Wild pigs are plentiful in the Bush essential in pig raising is to recognise the importance of sufficient shade cover being always available. The principal fodder supplies are coconuts pawpaws kumalas taro bananas the first named however, the most favoured

At present Samoa is one of the few countries where it can be said there is a total absence of any serious disease among cattle and it is hoped that this desirable

immunity will continue

The importation of well bred stallions and bulls during the past year is practical proof of an effort towards raising the standard of stock in the Territory

A parasitic u ease identified as Haemonchus in 1923 caused considerable mortality especially among young cattle on one estate. No recurrence of the disease has since been noted at least to any serious extent

Importations of Live Stock are generally for breeding and improvement of herds

The introduction of a stallion and Ordinance the provision of which is briefly castration of bulls and stallions not approved of for freeding purposes-has resulted in a decrease in the number of unsuitable animals under this heading

Lver since New Zealand obtained Samoa as a result of the war now holding these Islands under a Mandate of 1919 a very complete system of Adminis tration has been inaugurated. The New Zealand Parliament are granting every year £20 000 for im provements and speaking generally the material improvement all over the Islands is evident. It is noticeable that the 40 000 Samoans before the war a dwindling race are now increasing their number owing to the samtary improvements which have taken place while water supplies and other social betterment is properly looked after. A number of smaller and less productive Samoan Crown estates-property acquired in the way of war reparation-are now under the control of the Government and cocoanut plantations are inaugurated. The existing land laws have of course been a great obstacle in the Government a attempts to create in the native's mind a better appre ciation of the white man's education and view points. but the three thousand Matais-local Chiefs-are slowly being won over to the Government's point of view In the Tonga Island 82 acres is being preserved for every Samoan youth for I fe time at a peppercorn rent and this prudent step will undoubtedly lead to im provements in agriculture and the Samoans taking a more modern view of things in their Islands By degrees no doubt the Samoan Islands with their wonderful fertility and healthy climate will seriously take up live stock breeding as their geographical position is such as to constitute them a handy source of production for many an Eastern coun-As a pig raising country Samoa should have a great future and by degrees when pigs of good strains from Europe are imported the wild pigs in the Bush now doing much harm to the Plantations will disappear Indiscriminate breeding however will have to be done

square miles. The climate is most rather hot The sighted them and landed at one of the largest which population consists of Papuan and Malay negroes. The Islands were the first in the Pacific to be dis covered by the white man—in fact they were known.

This group of Islands is situated SE of the and charted long before Australia was discovered, Bismarck Islands and holds a total area of 17 000 as the Spaniard Alvaro de Mendana in the year 1568 original source of supply of gold from which King Solomon built his Golden Temple The history of the Islands is full of romantic happenings as they have been cherished by many Nations In 1893 a British Protectorate was declared over the southern Sciomons while the northern group came under the sway of Ger many then being part of the German New Guinea The three largest Islands now under possessions The three largest Islands now under the British Protectorate are Malaita Ysabel and Guadalcanal the total area under British protection being over 11 000 square miles probably embracing of million acres The postion of this Island group is nearly 1 800 miles from Sydney While the climate is not exactly healthy with malaria faver sometimes raging it is not nearly so bad as reputed and sanita tion strictly enforced among the natives is preventing any serious outbreaks of malaria Hurricanes are almost unknown At an elevation of 6 000 feet on the moun tains the morning temperature is seldom above 50 One of the drawbacks is the number of crocodiles and the abundance of mosquitoes The main stay in agriculture is of course the cocoanut planta tions much encouraged by the Government since the system of planting these trees 33 feet apart was adopted some years ago whereby it is possible to plant 50 trees to the acre it has considerably contri buted to promote vigorous growth and size resulting in large increases in the exports

The Government have adopted a land leasing system according to which the Landholders pay 3d per acre for the first five years 6d per acre for the next five years 3s per acre from the 11th to the 20th year and 6s from the 21st to the 33rd year whereupon the encouraged rent is paid by 500 on unimproved value—a system which has proved very attractive to settlers. The population is now probably 165,000 and the density is chiefly in the Island of Malaita. They are almost all Melanesians some intensely black while a great number have shades from very dark to nale brown To day most of the natives speak English or have a fair knowledge of the language. Trade in imported articles is increasing every year every possible com modity utilised by the white man now being readily purchased by the natives At a distance of 200 miles from the Solomon Group lie the Santa Cruz Group of Islands which for administrative purposes are in cluded in the Solomon Islands Protectorate inhabitants of these Islands are all Polynesians in colour from the lightest shade of brown to vellow and black They are physically a very fine race intelligent and friendly but always inclined to quarrel Perhaps the most valuable of all the Islands under the British Solomon Protectorate is Bougainville the value of which can probably not be over rated. This Island was originally discovered by a Frenchman bearing the same name in 1768 but came into German possession in 1886 While breeding of all types of domestic animals has long taken place in these Islands it is only lately that the Government have given more encouragement to live stock breeding and it is felt that there is a great field for expansion As these valuable Islands are now under Australian Protectorate it is to be hoped that improvements in breeding may be more general There is a valuable field for Live Stock men and specially pig and poultry breeding should be

Livestock Breeding in Tahiti (Society Islands).

This island the largest of the Society Island Group (Archipel de la Societé) is by general consent one of those happy islands where life seems to be one long The Group cons sts of a number of islands of which Tahiti is certainly the best developed Among the other prosperous islands are Tahao Raiatea and Husheine They le in two groups in the South Pacific Ocean and were claimed by France for a number of years prior to being formally annexed in 1880 The navigator Capt Cook in 1769 visited them but in Spanish annals it is stated that Pedro Fernandez de Quiros reported having discovered the islands in the year 1606 They are still ruled by a native sovereign but the French Government extract taxes and in many other respects exercise dominat on. The area is about 615 square miles with exceedingly fertile so l and pastures and plantations are remarkably luxuriant. The cotton plant reaches here considerable develop ment and other tropical crops such as cocoa coffee and sugar form the chief articles of trade but large quantities of copra vanilla and mother o pearl are The capital Papeete is the seat of the French Government Recently an Experimental Farm was attached to the Agricultural Station and experi ments bearing upon live stock breeding have been inaugurated Favourable reports have been issued from time to time by the Director with whom interested parties might correspond on matters in reference to live stock breeding. There should be opportuni ties for a limited number of Pedigree stud animals chiefly pigs and poultry but also for cattle. The French Craonnais and Bayeux pig breeds have been introduced without exactly proving suitable to the native farmers and it is likely that one or two among the American breeds would be found more suitable and a smaller British breed such as the Berkshire would probably meet with success if imported. No live stock census has been recently taken but neither the number of cattle nor of sheep and p gs is large
